CATHERINE CALVERT AND HERBERT RAWLINSON IN "OUT OF THE NIGHT" AT REGENT THEATER FOR TWO DAYS

"Out of the Night" is an exceptionally beautiful love story, full of dramatic coloring. It is by the gifted author, E. Lloyd Sheldon. Catherine Calvert, the star, supported by Herbert Rawlinson, is one of the most winsome of cinema actresses. She has appeared in many a notable play and has been a large success from the beginning of her career. In this latest production in which she stars, it is said that she has outdone herself. The story is one that has a powerful heart appeal and with the many exquisite scenes, both interior and exterior, it is said to be a very popular picture. It is showing the first two days of next week at the Regent.

There is a certain charm about a performance of the great moral drama, "Ten Nights in a Barroom." It is a story which may have been seen, and have been so impressed that they will see it again, an opportunity will be given when it appears at the Orpheum, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, to gratify their wish. To add to the popularity of this already popular play, Arthur Morgan, who has engaged to play the part of Joe Morgan, the drunkard, the well-known actor, Robert Downing, who for the last few years has turned his attention to evangelistic work, but who feels he can do some work by reaching the many who go to the theater, especially with a play of such great heart interest as this one, will be seen in "Fame and Fortune" at the Regent, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The story of "Fame and Fortune" is about a town that has driven out certain men because they are too good for it. These men, who are in a new place and only await a leader to take vengeance on their persecutors. About
