CONTEMPT OF THE AGES FOR KAISER IN HISTORY

World's Annals Likely to Mark Him Most-Detested Figure of All Chronicles For His Outrages of Land and Sea

William the Second, King of tics of the Kaiser to serve as a back-Prussia and German emperor, de-feated in his quarter-century "Gott" theology, his professed love scheme to Teutonize the world, will feated in his quarter-century scheme to Teutonize the world, will have the distinction of going down in history as the most thoroughly detested man that ever lived, with possible exception of Judas Iscariot.

His career may be divided into the two aspects suggested here. Previous to 1914 his entire life centered around one idea. It possessed him, it became fixed. Memoirs of men and women who met him, portraits and sopeches of him all gave evidence that the thought of military domination was the supreme motive of his existence. Since 1914 with the first atrocities in Belgium, the execution of Edith Cavell, the sinking of the Lusitania, the crucifixion of Canadian and other allied soldiers, the unspeakable crimes against the people of northern France, against the Red Cross, the warfare of gas and flame and bombing expeditions against unfortified towns—for all of which the peoples of the rest of the world have held the Kaiser directly responsible—combined to make the German!

"Gott" theology, his professed love for his army and navy.

Concerning his early life, little need be said. He was born January 27, 1859, in Berlin. When his father Freedrick, died, William II ascended the throne June 15, 1888.

member of the German government. The bombing of London, the submarine raids even on the Atlantic coast, futile but actuated by the same small malice that caused the sinking of the Lusitania, were added counts in the indictment against William the Murderer.

Propaganda Increased Contempt There came revelations, too, of propaganda activities in the United States, the blowing up of munitions factories in many parts of the country, the work of Boy-Ed and his coconspirators, and even of Von Bernstorff, ambassador. All these had their effect in arousing resentment against the kaiser.

With it all, however, the German emperor kept up his outward show of bravado. His speeches in the last few months were just as bombastic as ever. In September he spoke to his "dear friends," the workers at Krupp's and, with characteristic hypocrisy, maintained that every one in the remotest corner of the German empire knew that he had left. the remotest corner of the Ger-an empire knew that he had left Don't stay stuffed-up!

The time for a just estimate of the reland."

The time for a just estimate of the kaiser will not come for many a year, in the belief of historians today. A great deal of sorrow and anguish will have to be forgotten. But the verdict of the future is not likely to be much kinder than that of the present. People to-day will look on the kaiser as a man who threw away the lives of his subjects to satisfy a personal ambition.
