

SOLDIERS IN FRANCE NEED HOME PARCELS ON CHRISTMAS

Coming of Peace to Have No Effect on Great Shipments of Presents to the Front

"Peace is here but its coming to us does not mean the boys will be home in a few weeks. It means they'll have to stay overseas, many of them for a year, and more. They'll need Christmas parcels and letters from home more than ever now that there's subjected to greater temptations than any army has ever faced in the history of the world. The Christmas parcel giving is infinitely more important now than it has ever been before. That is why we are keeping these rooms wide open."

These Christmas parcels, it means a touch of home that is invaluable to the soldier fighting the many temptations besetting him. The Red Cross rooms were opened last Monday for the inspection of Christmas parcels. Only one package was allowed to be sent to the front. A Christmas label from the War Department which is sent to his parents or friends in America. They take the parcel to Red Cross headquarters where it is inspected and where it is wrapped and sealed, the label is affixed. With the proper amount of postage supplied by the sender, it is sent under the auspices of the Red Cross on its way to brighten the life of a fighter overseas.
