A strategy that was resorted to in the capture of an Austrian post was thus described by Lieutenant Violini:

"The men lit cigarets and stuck them on the barbed wire in front of the Austrian trenches," he said. "Then they dropped down and made their way to the flank of the Austrian division. They found almost no one there, and virtually everybody was in the front firing at the cigarets, we took 300 prisoners and machine guns and other war material, whose use we did not even know, so inferior
