

Littlefield Urges a Short Session

Paul Littlefield, general secretary of the State Chamber of Commerce in an interview today declared that the business interests of the state would welcome a short session of the Legislature next winter. He said: "A short session of the Legislature would appeal strongly to all citizens. The short session idea should be encouraged by everyone. A three months' session means only about half the personal expenses by Senators and Representatives as are incurred by a long session."

"The business interests would also appreciate a short session. Business men are practically charged at the present time with the solution of the very great and serious problems accompanying the demobilization of our armies and the reconversion of our industries to a peace basis. "Under these circumstances it would be but fair to all the many interests which are necessarily affected by state legislation to make the session of the General Assembly cover as short a period of time as practicable."

"This is not said with the idea of conveying an impression that desirable new legislation should not be considered but that the discussions arising out of new state problems should be confined to a period of three months so that the additional burdens of uncertainty will be over in that time."

"Other reasons will add to the popularity of the short session idea."

Delinquent Tax Collections Go Above Estimate of the Auditor General Today

The new bureau of delinquent taxes in the Auditor General's Department has collected $952,892.14 in the first ten months of its operation and it is possible that November may add three quarters of a million dollars more. A statement issued today by Auditor General Charles A. Snyder showed that up to date the figure of $1,500,000 which he estimated the new bureau would collect of money due to the Commonwealth had been exceeded by over $120,000.

The amount collected to date from January 1 is given as $1,520,901.58, which is stated by Mr. Snyder was without expenditure of a penny for attorney's fees.
