

HARRISBURG TELEGRAPH A NEWSPAPER FOR THE HOME Founded 1851

Published evenings except Sunday by THE TELEGRAPH PRINTING CO. Telephone Building, Federal Square

Member American Newspaper Publishers' Association, Eastern Office, Story, Brooks & Finley

By carrier, ten cents a week; by mail, $3.00 a year in advance.

It fortifies my soul to know That though I perish, truth is so; That hooves'er I stray, and range.

THANKSGIVING Make a joyful noise unto the Lord, all ye lands.

When He said unto them, Go your way, eat the fat, drink the sweet, and send portions to them for whom nothing is prepared; for this day is holy unto our Lord; neither be ye sorry, for the joy of the Lord is your strength.

A STIGMA ON THE POLICE CITY COUNCIL chooses to ignore its plain duty in making an investigation of the police department following the federal raids of Saturday night.

ENOUGH OF POLITICIANS THE New York World shies away from the Republican proposal to nominate General Pershing for President.

His Friends Protest DAVID LAWRENCE, one of the Washington newspaper correspondents, said to be close to the President and who recently wrote an appreciation of Colonel House, has just given expression in a dispatch to the New York Evening Post to some rather surprising news concerning the man in the White House.

THE FLEET'S SURRENDER (From Phila. Evening Ledger) For a century to come no German will be able to boast the unsundering surrender of his nation's fleet without a sense of shame and overwhelming despair.

Col. Harvey Sez, Sez He "The ruling spirit strong in death" even in their retirement under the terms of the armistice, the German soldiers continue to the last their treacherous and destructive practices.

WELL KNOWN PEOPLE —James Collins Jones, Philadelphia attorney, who was here yesterday at a Public Service hearing.

DO YOU KNOW —That Pennsylvania state forest lands are approaching the 1,000,000 acre mark.

Historic Harrisburg The original proposition to extend Capitol Park to the River Front was objected to because of its expense.

What Is the Answer? Portland is to be deprived of its steamship line to Boston because of the excessive cost of operation.

Another "Scrap of Paper" The whirligig of time brings in its revenges. The invincibility of the German army and navy is now a scrap of paper.

In the Future "There is one time coming when men will openly enjoy their wives' disfigurements."

Politics in Pennsylvania By the Ex-Committeeman Return of Governor-elect William C. Sproul to Philadelphia to-day is expected to be followed by some intimations as to his course in appointments and legislation.

THE ISSUE OF 1920 (From the Phila. Bulletin) The report given currency by the Providence Journal that the underlying reason of Secretary McAdoo's withdrawal from the Cabinet and his position as Federal Director of Railroads, was his opposition to the policy of government ownership.

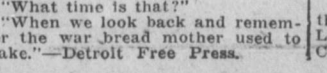

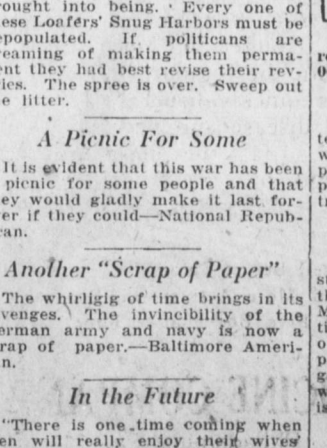

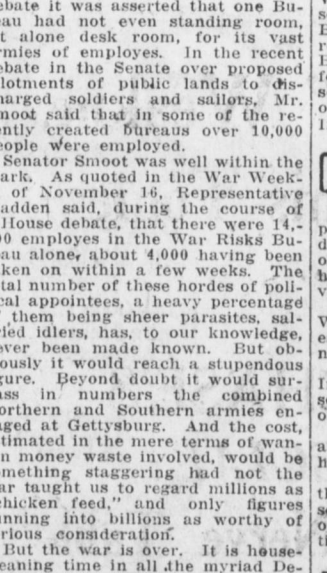

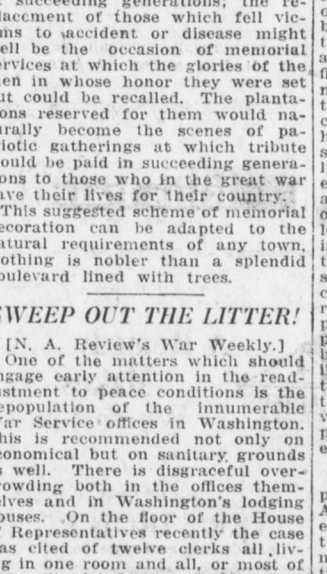

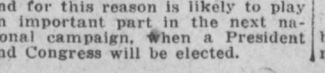

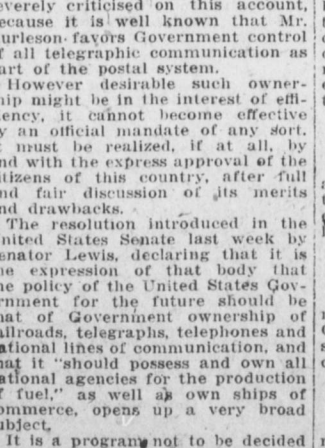

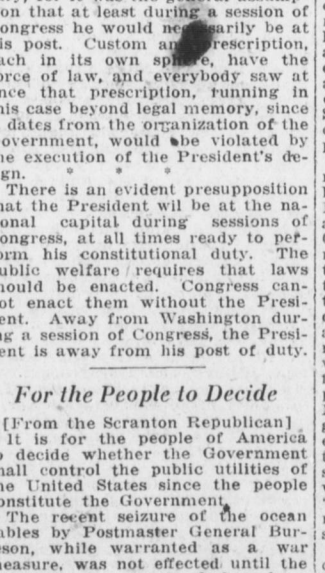

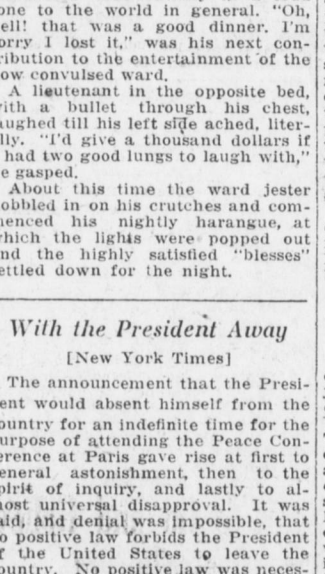

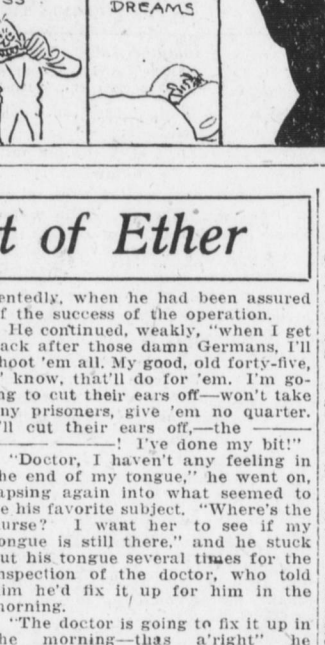

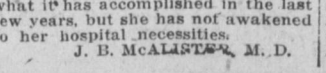

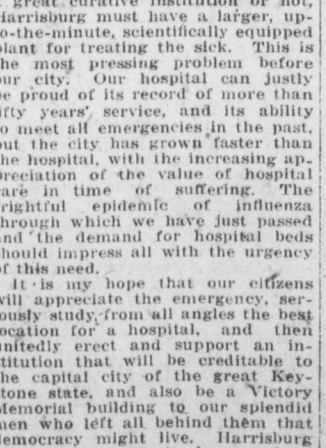

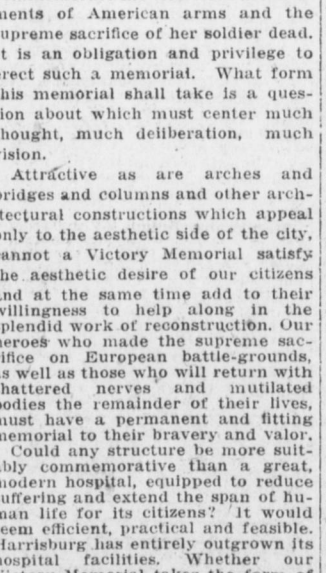

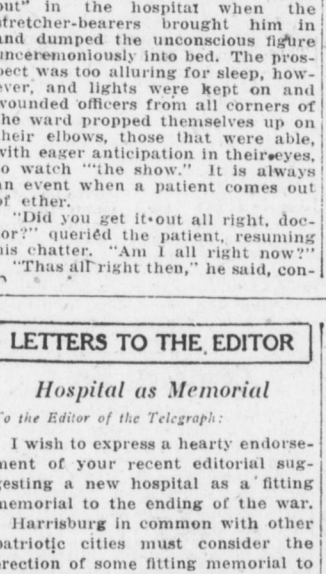

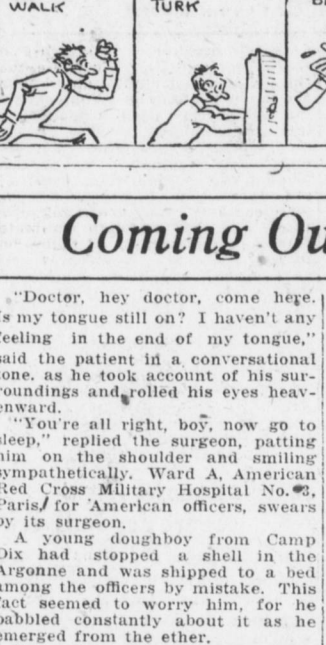

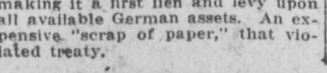

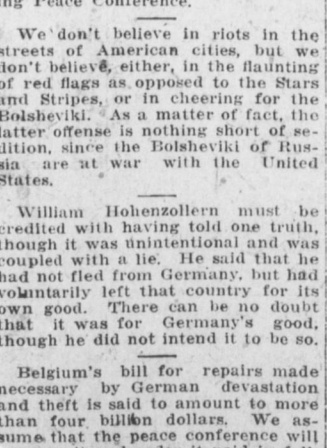

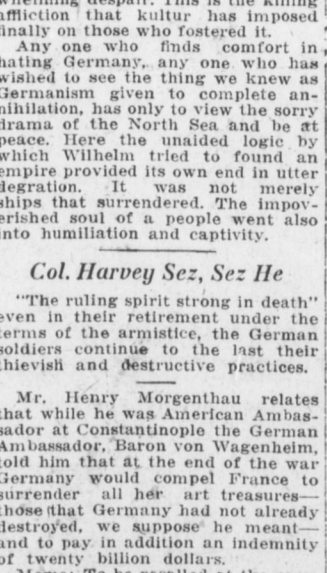

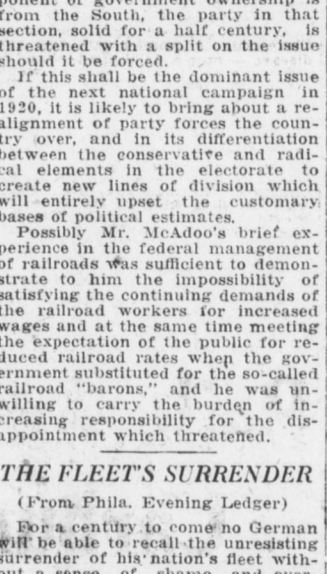

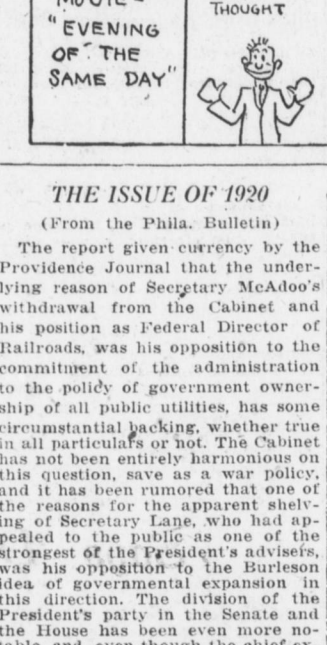

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR Hospital as Memorial To the Editor of the Telegraph: I wish to express a hearty endorsement of your recent editorial suggesting a new hospital as a fitting memorial to the ending of the war.

With the President Away [New York Times] The announcement that the President would absent himself from the country for an indefinite time for the purpose of attending the Peace Conference at Paris gave rise at first to general astonishment, then to the spirit of inquiry, and lastly to almost universal disapproval.

For the People to Decide [From the Scranton Republican] It is for the people of America to decide whether the Government shall control the public utilities of the United States since the people constitute the Government.

A Picnic For Some It is evident that this war has been a picnic for some people and that they would gladly make it last forever if they could.—National Republican.

Another "Scrap of Paper" The whirligig of time brings in its revenges. The invincibility of the German army and navy is now a scrap of paper.

While many of the young Dauphin countians, enlisted or drafted, are just a bit disappointed that they had to remain in cantonments or stations in the United States instead of getting overseas, they are by no means pining about it, but on the contrary are having a very lively and interesting time, which will fit them all the better for business life.

Another letter says: "Home folks reading their local newspapers see stories of men being sent to Camp Greenleaf, Lytle, Ga. I do not doubt it a bit if they wondered what kind of a place Lytle is when reading these accounts because I read myself before getting here. Lytle is not mentioned in this little place, but it is a very large and adequate place. Fighting during the Civil War in this region is responsible for putting this little town in its present place. Although having a population of less than 1000, and in appearance resembling a western town or the villages that are founded on gold seekers in the far north, this town has been the rendezvous for months for the boys from this camp. In the evening hours after retreat the boys were glad to get their "eat" and a good meal and take in a moving picture show even if they were compelled to wait some times for a while on hard board seats in an unheated building to gaze upon a picture on the screen that was from appearances as if they had been in the movies first because a successful Wall Street merchant admitted the other day that he was a gold seeker in the far north, this is not a far cry from the fact that the boys from this camp have been here for some time. The boys are getting homesick. Uncle Sam has not been in the army and they are willing to do what is asked of them until they discontinue to wear the Olive Drab."

Another letter says: "Home folks reading their local newspapers see stories of men being sent to Camp Greenleaf, Lytle, Ga. I do not doubt it a bit if they wondered what kind of a place Lytle is when reading these accounts because I read myself before getting here. Lytle is not mentioned in this little place, but it is a very large and adequate place. Fighting during the Civil War in this region is responsible for putting this little town in its present place. Although having a population of less than 1000, and in appearance resembling a western town or the villages that are founded on gold seekers in the far north, this town has been the rendezvous for months for the boys from this camp. In the evening hours after retreat the boys were glad to get their "eat" and a good meal and take in a moving picture show even if they were compelled to wait some times for a while on hard board seats in an unheated building to gaze upon a picture on the screen that was from appearances as if they had been in the movies first because a successful Wall Street merchant admitted the other day that he was a gold seeker in the far north, this is not a far cry from the fact that the boys from this camp have been here for some time. The boys are getting homesick. Uncle Sam has not been in the army and they are willing to do what is asked of them until they discontinue to wear the Olive Drab."

Another letter says: "Home folks reading their local newspapers see stories of men being sent to Camp Greenleaf, Lytle, Ga. I do not doubt it a bit if they wondered what kind of a place Lytle is when reading these accounts because I read myself before getting here. Lytle is not mentioned in this little place, but it is a very large and adequate place. Fighting during the Civil War in this region is responsible for putting this little town in its present place. Although having a population of less than 1000, and in appearance resembling a western town or the villages that are founded on gold seekers in the far north, this town has been the rendezvous for months for the boys from this camp. In the evening hours after retreat the boys were glad to get their "eat" and a good meal and take in a moving picture show even if they were compelled to wait some times for a while on hard board seats in an unheated building to gaze upon a picture on the screen that was from appearances as if they had been in the movies first because a successful Wall Street merchant admitted the other day that he was a gold seeker in the far north, this is not a far cry from the fact that the boys from this camp have been here for some time. The boys are getting homesick. Uncle Sam has not been in the army and they are willing to do what is asked of them until they discontinue to wear the Olive Drab."

Another letter says: "Home folks reading their local newspapers see stories of men being sent to Camp Greenleaf, Lytle, Ga. I do not doubt it a bit if they wondered what kind of a place Lytle is when reading these accounts because I read myself before getting here. Lytle is not mentioned in this little place, but it is a very large and adequate place. Fighting during the Civil War in this region is responsible for putting this little town in its present place. Although having a population of less than 1000, and in appearance resembling a western town or the villages that are founded on gold seekers in the far north, this town has been the rendezvous for months for the boys from this camp. In the evening hours after retreat the boys were glad to get their "eat" and a good meal and take in a moving picture show even if they were compelled to wait some times for a while on hard board seats in an unheated building to gaze upon a picture on the screen that was from appearances as if they had been in the movies first because a successful Wall Street merchant admitted the other day that he was a gold seeker in the far north, this is not a far cry from the fact that the boys from this camp have been here for some time. The boys are getting homesick. Uncle Sam has not been in the army and they are willing to do what is asked of them until they discontinue to wear the Olive Drab."