

PARIS WILD WITH JOY OVER PEACE; CELEBRATE LONG

Captain Stackpole Tells of Cheering When Armistice Was Signed

Captain Edward J. Stackpole, Jr., now recovering from severe wounds in a Paris base hospital, in a letter to his wife received to-day, describes the happenings in the French capital the day the armistice was declared.

"To-day was a big day with a capital. At 5 o'clock in the morning of this day the armistice was signed and at the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month hostilities ceased on the western front. No more killing—it all over."

"Excitement prevailed in Paris, you may well guess. We could hear the guns booming and the people shouting way in here. The French maids went dancing through the hallways singing 'La guerre est finie' and things were very stirring."

"For the first time since September 5 I left the bed without a stretcher (two orderlies between them carried me to the street and placed me carefully on the seat of a taxi) all bundled up in bathrobes and coats and in company with Lt. Halley, who has a chest wound but can walk, we started forth as delighted as a kid at our release from bondage as a kid with a new toy."

"It was a wonderful treat. I felt like a baby being carried out to the cab and back again, but I wouldn't have missed seeing the crowds for anything."

New York on election day couldn't begin to touch Paris when the armistice was signed. It seemed as though the whole world had assembled together in the streets of Paris. All the buildings were draped with the flags of the Allies and crowds of students and soldiers and civilians thronged up and down the streets, waving flags and kissing the girls and singing. At times our bus traveled at the rate of 10 yards per hour and several times we got jammed for long stretches. To-night Paris will no doubt be drunk and they are going to light up for the first time since the war started.

"Every nation on the globe seemed to be represented in its soldiers except the Germans and Austrians. Even Turkey had one or two officers, wearing his fez and leading a girl along the street. The American flag was far more in evidence than the British. Y. M. C. A. men and soldiers who had fought valiantly the battle of Paris, were on the streets and in trucks as the contribution of the United States to the general hilarity, and they made plenty of noise. I didn't see many 'blesses'. I guess it was too dangerous for them."

"You'd have to see it to appreciate it. I expect they'll be celebrating right along now, in a somewhat more orderly fashion, but what I saw was a burst of enthusiasm, and I saw it."

Wednesday, November 13, he writes: "Saw Paris to-day; this time in company with Captain Hahn. We tried to get an open sea-going luge but had to content ourselves with taxis. It smelled startlingly like New York, but Paris is different somehow. In spite of the crowds we rode up around the Bois de Boulogne, Arch de Triomphe, Place de la Concorde and up and down all the avenues and boulevards without number, stayed out for an hour and a half for twenty francs."

Last evening he had put several gallons of oil in the cellar so that it would be ready for use when needed. GIRLS! BEAUTIFY YOUR HAIR AND STOP DANDRUFF

Hair becomes chagrined, wavy, lustrous and slick in few moments. Every bit of dandruff disappears and hair stops coming out.

For a few cents you can save your hair. In less than ten minutes you can double its beauty. Your hair becomes light, wavy, lustrous and abundant and stops coming out. It is so charming as a young girl's after applying some Danderuff. Also try this—moisten your hair with a little Danderuff and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or excessive oil, and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair. Danderuff surprises awaits those whose hair has been neglected or is scragged, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair, Danderuff dissolves every particle of dandruff, cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you see new hair—fine and lustrous at first—yes—but really new hair growing all over the scalp. Danderuff is the only hair restorer. Get a bottle of it, surely get a small bottle of Danderuff from an drug store or toilet counter and just try it.
