TRIBUTE PAID MANY DEAD IN ELK MEMORIAL

Impressive Services Held at Majestic Theater For Departed Members

Impressive memorial services were held by Harrisburg Lodge No. 12, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, in the Majestic Theater yesterday afternoon for the members of the organization who have passed on...

William H. Opperman played the opening number, "Allia Marcia," while the members of the lodge filed in to their seats. Miss Margaretta Kennedy, cellist, played Schumann's beautiful "Traumerel," and the Rev. George Edward Hawes, pastor of Market Square Presbyterian Church, pronounced the invocation...

In an eloquent memorial oration, Frank Loughran, member of Scranton Lodge No. 123, outlined the principles and the service of the order. He said: "The B. P. O. E., since its inception, has set aside a period of commemoration for their dead. Some one has called the period in which we live the golden age of fraternity. Here in the United States there are more fraternal organizations than in any other country. It is said that every one of every four of the adult population is a fraternal member of some such fraternal body. This desire in men to associate themselves together is not a development of modern days, or years, or centuries, but dates back to the very dawn of antiquity."

"The primary object was protection of the human history man's immunity to man began to assert itself. In union men found first a feeling of safety that later developed into strength and power. The avowed purpose of the B. P. O. E. is administering to those who are weakened in body and distressed in mind; to aid by charity those who are worthy and whom the hand of fate has pressed back to the wall to develop in men love of country; to quicken the patriotic pulse of the nation and to cultivate the social side of life. These aims and purposes are substantially set forth in what the order terms its constitution."

"What, then, is Elkdom?" the speaker asked. In answer he stated: "The Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks rests its arch upon the eternal principles that man never dies. And this principle divides itself into dual channels. First, in the sublime belief that an Omnipotent ruler the universe and that it is the destiny of man to win happiness in the realms of never-ending day. Second, in namely, that man never dies in the hearts of those who love him. And in the last hour of each passing day, at the chimes' toll of eleven, we turn from life's pursuits and life's pleasures to drink the silent toast to our departed brothers. So in the last month of each year we assemble in formal session beneath the draped altars and beside the flag-covered altar now eclipsed in roll of black, to attest that death is not the end."

Closing Ceremonies At the close of the address, Miss Kennedy played with grace and skill "Auld Lang Syne." She was followed by Miss Kanders, who sang "These Are They Which Came," from Gaul's "Holy City." Miss Kanders has a gloriously beautiful voice and was followed by the Rev. Vincent. The many muscicians present were highly pleased with her singing. Closing ceremonies, in which lodge officers participated, were followed by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne." Mr. Opperman played the closing number, "Coronation March."

The committee in charge of yesterday's memorial services included the following: Abner W. Hartman, esteemed leading knight, as chairman; James J. Carroll, representative; Clarence H. Sigler, treasurer, and Edwin J. Lewis, ex-officio. FORTY-HOUR SERVICE AT ST. MACKEY, POLK'S DECISION TREND

Chairman of Compensation Board Makes Interesting Observations

The real test of whether compensation can be granted to dependents of a railroad employe killed while engaged in course of his work for a line carrying interstate commerce is the work the employe was engaged in at the very time of his accident, without regard to any artificial reference to subsequent employment, according to an opinion handed down today by Chairman Harry A. Mackey of the State Compensation Board, in dismissing objections of the Philadelphia and Reading to the award of compensation for Ruth L. Frye, of Marysville, whose husband Preston Martin Frye, was killed in Rutherford yards in August. The man's duties were to "drop" cars in a classification yard and he had reported for work. There were no cars to be "dropped" and while waiting orders, Frye was killed. The company raised the claim that the man was engaged in furthering interstate commerce work. The referee held he was not.

Mr. Mackey discusses the trend of decisions and says that while laws are liberal and constructions equally so, now it is quite natural and proper that the same object should restrict the terms of compensation acts to as narrow a compass as possible in order to widen the opportunities of workmen's compensation laws and to include within its terms a large class of beneficiaries who otherwise would be cut off with no compensation for injuries suffered in the course of employment if adjudged an interstate activity without the negligence of the employe.

In conclusion Mr. Mackey says: "Inter-state commerce is a question of fact and not intention, and until a man actually performs some work we can not classify him merely upon the probability that had he not met with an accident there would have been no order intervening between his intention and the actual undertaking. Decisions referred to are held by Mr. Mackey to indicate the real test is the work the employe was engaged in." He quotes from a court decision that "He who waits, also serves."

Deer Season. Pennsylvania's deer season opened today with hundreds of men in the woods, according to reports of the State Game Commission. Many of these men are camping on sites for which permits were granted by the State Forestry Reservation Commission for hunting on State lands. In spite of the fact that over a quarter of a million Pennsylvanians are in the army the number of hunters licensed this year is about the same as previous years and reports indicate that the deer hunters are out in force. Many are hunting for the South Mountain region and the Juniata valley have passed through here the last few days.

Licenses Moving. Over 1,000 automobile license tags were sent early today from the new quarters of the State Highway department's automobile division to persons who had filed early applications for the plates and it is expected to ship hundreds daily until the end of the year. The automobile registration bureau is now in one building with its clerical, shipping and storage forces and the movement of tags will be facilitated. Pneumatic tired vehicles will taken care of this week, solid tired cars being cared for Saturday, while motor cycles will be listed later in the month.

Warnings of Dangers.—Dr. B. F. Royer, Acting Commissioner of Health, has issued a warning on the dangers of tuberculosis following influenza and urges that people undergo physical examination. He offers the free use of the state's establishments. Using Armory.—The Carbonade armory of the Reserve Militia has been turned over to the school board for that place for use as a high school.

Alney Chairman.—Chairman Alney of the Public Service Commission, has been appointed chairman of the committee to act on the skipstons in Philadelphia.

Had No License.—The State Medical Bureau has caused the arrest of Jacob Behfeld, charged with practicing medicine without a license in Philadelphia. This is the first of a series, it is said.

Bucks Men Mad.—State Game Commission authorities have started an inquiry into the charges made by Bucks county sportsmen that some justices of the peace have been dealing unfairly with men accused of violating game laws.

To Buy Fish.—As a result of the decision of the Public Service Commission dismissing the complaints against the fire service main charges of the Springfield Consolidated Water Co., there will be appeals to the Superior Court, and meanwhile the municipalities will buy chemical fire engines and establish their own fire services, independent of the water company as far as possible.

Itney Week.—This will be Itney week in the Superior Court at Philadelphia and the appeals will be heard. The Harrisburg cases are on the list.

Great Work on Lake.—Commissioner of Fisheries N. R. Buller reports that the take of white fish and herring eggs on Lake Erie during the last three weeks has been far in excess of what was anticipated. There is not an empty jar on the batteries at the Erie station, and the following hatcheries have also been supplied with all the eggs of this species that they can take care of: Union City, Pleasant Mount and Torredale. The output of these fish for the coming year will be considerably above the average, and it is the constant stocking of Lake Erie which has made it such an excellent fishing ground.
