Belgian Baritone With Composer as Accompanist

Music-hungry Harrisburg feasted last night at the best musical banquet that has come to Harrisburg under the care of the Wednesday Club in many years. Fahnestock Hall was crowded to the doors with eager hearers who attended the recital given by Louis Graveure, eminent baritone, acclaimed as the highest in rank among all baritone soloists of this day.

The opening numbers of the program were the gypsy songs from the pen of Dvorak. "My Song." "The Triangle," "The Mist," "Tune The Strings," "Songs' My Mother Taught me," "Gypsy Garments," and "Freedom," were sung with airy grace. Particularly delightful, was "Songs My Mother Taught me," in which there was a revealing of infinitely tender feeling on the part of the singer, and "Gypsy Garments," a happy little ditty setting forth the joys of a Bohemian existence.

"The second part took up the French songs. Franck's dreamy "Nocturne was the first selection, followed by the lovesongs, "J'ai Dit Aux Etollesk" and "Mignonne." The emotional powers of the singer were displayed to good advantage in "Salome! Salome" from "Herodiade."
