WET WEATHER NO CHECK ON RE DCROSS

bership in the Red Cross—and by paying a dollar receive the 1919 membership button, window emblem, Red Cross seals and receipt. Wherever this poster is displayed dollar memberships will be received for the Red Cross.

Wet Weather

The wet weather of to-day put a damper on the preparations for Harrisburg's big volunteer registration for the Red Cross to-morrow and Friday, but it will take more than the weather to stop the registration itself, headquarters at Third and Locust street said this morning.

Harrisburg seems to be rather tired of well-doing, insofar as the majority of war activities are concerned, but it still has a warm spot in its heart for the Red Cross.

What's Going On?

"What is the Red Cross trying to do?" is the question heard occasionally. Here is the answer: The Red Cross wants memberships.

Memberships are $1 each. Hereafter the work of the organizations will be kept up through memberships.

Of each dollar paid for memberships fifty cents stays with the local chapter.

That is the story in a nutshell. The regular campaign begins Monday. Volunteers may join to-morrow and Friday. There is a place on each of the 403 city blocks where memberships will be received. Each block will have ten or twelve workers during the regular push next week. But enrollments to-morrow and Friday are to citizens themselves.

Headquarters at Third and Locust streets will be opened evenings hereafter to receive volunteer memberships.

The statement of complaint says that, whereas said commanders were denounced the southern end of the line, whereas Germany had her troops against the line in the north. General Hoffmann then declared he would move on Petrograd, if Leon Trotsky, the Bolshevik foreign minister, did not sign the treaty.

Trotsky Informs Berlin

"Dr. Von Kuehlmann and I had hoped to make peace with Russia on the basis of President Wilson's principles, but Ludendorff always telegraphed 'No' to our proposals. I worked day and night to bring Dr. Von Kuehlmann and Trotsky together. At the last moment, the latter sent his famous telegram to the world, demanding that the German people revolt and destroy their government. This telegram inflamed Berlin, which denounced Trotsky as a man with whom it would not treat. Then Trotsky was informed that the German troops would occupy Courland and Lithuania and would advance on Petrograd."

Count Czernin Points to Ludendorff as the Obstacle of Germany

Vienna, Dec. 11.—Count Czernin, the former Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, accuses General Ludendorff, the Quartermaster General of the German army and virtual dictator of the empire's military policy in the last days of the conflict, as the man who stood between the Central Empires and peace on numerous occasions. Ludendorff was adamant throughout efforts to induce the German government to make concessions of an important nature that would have gone toward ending the war, Count Czernin says. He outlined what in his estimation were the problems to be settled before peace can be made secure, and expressed hope for an agreement among the nations of the world to disarm.

Recounting the desperate efforts on the part of Austria to reach some sort of peace before the final and absolute collapse of both the Austrian and German empires, Count Czernin said:

England in Way of Peace

"The German people wanted peace long ago, and even Emperor William wanted to see the end of the war, but the attitude of England prevented steps being taken. Emperor William said to me on one occasion: 'How can we get peace with England declaring we must be destroyed?'"

"Nothing is more dangerous in politics than to advise a son who wishes to see them; not as they are. We understood that the only way to arrange matters was to get England and Germany to agree."

With the knowledge of Emperor Charles, I proposed to Emperor William that Austria would give Germany the province of Galicia and permit her to have her way in Russian Poland, and several times Austria and Lorraine were ceded back to France. I went to Kretzenach and presented this plan to Dr. Bethmann-Hollweg, then German Imperial Chancellor, then he informed me that he was forced to decline to enter into the scheme. I do not know whether or not Ludendorff had a hand in the matter, but I was informed that it was not possible to get the Kaiser to the Germans. I sent Herr Vassilko, a Socialist member of Parliament, to Berlin to talk with Matthias Erzberger, the Clerical leader, and Dr. Albert G. W. Suedemann, a Socialist member of the Reichstag, to was to tell them why the war must end and give them both to understand that another peace resolution should be introduced in the Reichstag, directed against both the military party and the pan-Germans.

Reichstag Fails to Act

"At this juncture, however, the German armies began to win victories once more and the Reichstag did nothing. Thus we were badly situated. When our chances were bad and the Entente nations were elated, they would not talk peace. When we were winning, Ludendorff would not consent to permit peace negotiations. I always wanted to use victory as an opportunity to bring about peace, and several times I had an impression that I might succeed."

"I sent Count Mendorf to Switzerland to see General J. C. Smuts, (who was in Switzerland last March in the interests of the British government. He succeeded, but I was unable to tell just what terms Germany would make. I do not recall that Mr. Lloyd George, the British premier, mentioned any conditions last February. Germany assured me that no definite offers were received from England, and I believe this was true."

Mistrusted England and France

"England appeared to intend us to crush Germany and France showed a similar attitude. President Wilson was the only head of an Allied power who did not appear to have this in mind. Emperor William could not bring himself to yield Alsace and Lorraine."

"Regarding Emperor William I feel that he did not want the war, but he did not know how to get out of it. In this, I believe, the heads of the Entente powers are wrong, for they probably believe he caused the struggle. I was minister to Rumania when the war began and I honestly believe that no one wanted hostilities to begin. I have the impression that neither Emperor Francis Joseph, Emperor William nor their ministers wanted war. I might explain the fact that war started by saying that there was too much diplomatic bluffing, with everyone looking for the other fellow to recede from his position.

Points to Wilson Failure

"Every way to get out of the war was tried by us, excepting war with Germany. When any considers how much weaker than Germany we were, he can see how impossible it was for me to dictate terms. Now, if President Wilson finds it difficult to impress his views on the Entente how was it possible for a man like me to do anything with Germany?"

"I hope that an agreement to disarm will be reached. President Wilson is the man who is able to bring this about. I believe his plan for a league of nations is feasible and would solve the whole problem. I have shown in public addresses why power to punish any nation resorting to arms is the only way to keep the peace."

Ludendorff Forced Treaty

"I signed the peace treaty of Brest-Litovk, but we got nothing from it. This fact is worthy of mention. It was Ludendorff who forced Dr. Richard Von Kuehlmann, the German foreign secretary to make that peace. We occupied the southern end of the line, whereas Germany had her troops against the line in the north. General Hoffmann then declared he would move on Petrograd, if Leon Trotsky, the Bolshevik foreign minister, did not sign the treaty."

to eighteen, for himself and the former empress. The family life of the erstwhile royal pair appears to flow as evenly as that of any middle-aged couple who might be enjoying a quiet country holiday. Their rooms on the first floor of the castle command a wide view of the landscape. They dine with their host Count von Bentinck, being often joined at the meal by the count's brother, a noble residing in a neighboring castle, and pass much of their time together strolling through the castle grounds.

On Saturday Herr Hohenzollern went for a walk into the country while his wife explored the neighborhood.

The quiet of the village here is occasionally started by wild rumors of plots upon the former emperor's life, but the "suspicious person" found lurking about the castle" generally turns out to be a harmless newspaperman in search of copy. Another rumor of which no confirmation can be had, is that Herr Hohenzollern has bought a villa in the neighborhood.

The entrance to the castle still is strictly guarded.
