bushes being planted to replace smaller plants which are not hardy and must be removed from beds each fall and then replanted in the spring again.
In addition to this work, much transplanting was done in the nurseries of the Hun army. French peasants who desire to plant trees may get fine ones from the nursery at nominal prices. Instructions on the planting and proper care of the trees which are furnished will be given here explained to insure their growth. FRENCH RETURN TO VILLAGES TO BEGIN RECONSTRUCTION OF HOMES

RE-BUILDING THEIR HOMES
No more will the quaint built houses of French villages greet the eyes of the world tourists. The terrible destruction wrought by the Hun in northern France left the region desolate. With the withdrawal of the Hun army, French peasants immediately began the work of reconstruction. Due to the lack of material, everything possible was used in building shelters, with the result shown in the photograph. In the course of a year or two the villages will, no doubt, be rebuilt upon a modern lines, but the quaint architectural lines of centuries ago will be missing.

MARKETS OILS AND MOTORS LEAD THE MARKET

Drive Against Studebaker Causes Moderate Reversal; Petroleum Rises
New York, Dec. 16.—Wall Street.—Oils and motors led the list to higher quotations in the first half hour of today's stock market, popular issues of those groups gaining from 1/2 to 3 points. An early drive against Studebaker, based presumably on announcement of the company's next issue, caused a moderate reversal, but this was soon more than recovered. In the initial rise but rails were irregular and utilities yielded to further pressure.
