

GOVERNMENT IS WITHOUT TROOPS

the government without troops. Coming From Kiel These advices were transmitted by the Exchange Telegraph correspondent at Copenhagen. They add that large numbers of sailors are reported to be coming from Kiel to join their comrades in Berlin. Nearly one hundred persons were killed in the street fighting which began in Berlin on Tuesday morning, according to the latest reports from the German capital. The Republican guards tried several times to take the royal stables and the headquarters of the revolting stables, but were repulsed.

Civilians Armed A large number of the soldiers belonging to the Berlin guard joined the sailors, Vorwaerts reports, and a few of the Republican Guards followed their example. When these reports were sent a large number of armed civilians were continuing to hold the sailors at the royal stables and in the Koenigsstrasse. This street, with all its houses, is reported in the hands of the sailors, Vorwaerts reports, and a few of the Republican Guards followed their example.

Hold Conference Dr. Liebknecht, the advices added, went to the chancellor's palace and had a long conference with the ministers, the result of which was unknown. Further fighting was anticipated, it was added, as the Spartacists and the sailors are said to have decided to attempt to force the government to return to Potsdam. The latter were stationed in Unter den Linden and on the Dederachen Platz.

Commander Released Berlin, Dec. 24.—Herr Weis, military commander of Berlin, arrested Monday by revolting sailors during the fighting in which many sailors and republican guards were killed and wounded, was released today. He spent the night in the basement of the former royal stables. Some sailors were in favor of immediate execution of Weis. Others proposed that he be locked up in a small chamber with the dead bodies of sailors and other victims of Monday's fighting. That he escaped violence and possible death, was due to the intervention of Socialist leaders.

Still Hold Stables Fifty sailors, it is reported, still are concealed in the Red Palace, from which most of them were driven Monday by the Republican guards. Twelve hundred sailors are holding out in the royal stables. Both groups have announced that the buildings would have to be razed before they surrendered. Looting has been in progress in the palace since yesterday. Many private possessions of the former emperor and former empress have been carried away or destroyed. It is reported that the marines are expecting heavy reinforcements from Kiel and Wilhelmshaven.

PRESIDENT GIVEN ROYAL RECEPTION

The President's trip to London was carried out according to schedule. His train, which left Dover at 12.33 o'clock, arrived at Charing Cross station here exactly on time. Guns Salute the President As the President's train crossed the Thames and entered the station the crowd cheered. A salute of forty-two guns was fired from the Tower of London and in Hyde Park. The parade was witnessed by such an outpouring of people and amid such enthusiasm as London never has known except upon the occasion of coronations and of Queen Victoria's jubilee in 1897.

The progress of the royal and presidential arrival in semi-state coaches, each drawn by four horses, with two postillions in scarlet coats, which breeches and black silk hats, with two footmen in long buff overcoats sitting behind. The coaches were escorted by squads of scarlet-coated outriders. Airplanes Soar Above Wilson Enthusiastic scenes marked the President's arrival at the Charing Cross station. As he, accompanied by King George, emerged from the station the crowds repeatedly cheered. Dozens of airplanes soared overhead. The bells and chimes throughout the city also pealed a welcome.

During the procession from the station, flags and hats of handkerchiefs were waved. The President was uncovered throughout the drive to acknowledge the cheers. Royalty Greets President The scene inside the Charing Cross station was no less cordial. The reception party included King George, Queen Mary, Princess Mary, Premier Lloyd George and all the members of the cabinet. Heads of the army and navy, premiers from the various dominions, a representative of India and other officials. There was a guard of honor and a band of the Grenadier Guards played the "Star Spangled Banner." The King and Queen and Princess Mary greeted the President.

Meets Lloyd George President Wilson, accompanied by King George and the Duke of Connaught, inspected the guard of honor while the band of the Grenadier Guards played the "Star Spangled Banner." The King and Queen and Princess Mary greeted the President.

Before the President's arrival it seemed as though London was having its coldest day of the winter. While the band of the Grenadier Guards played the "Star Spangled Banner" at 11 o'clock streets in the West End were filled with holiday throngs afoot and in motorcars. England, Dec. 26.—The weather was bright and crisp this morning and Dover wore a festive appearance with its decorations and the announced throngs ready to greet the President and Mrs. Wilson. Their arrival was signaled by the firing of a royal salute. Large crowds lined the admiralty pier and its approaches long before the Presidential suite ashore.

The Duke of Connaught, with his suite, accompanied by John W. Davis, the American ambassador, Earl of Reading, British ambassador to the United States, Lord Herschell, and the mayor and the corporation of Dover were on the pier to meet the visitors. The mayor presented an address of welcome to the President. President Wilson then reviewed the Guard of Honor from the naval garrison of Dover. The scene in the harbor as the Presidential vessel entered was animated. Airplanes and seaplanes circled overhead while the warships in the harbor which joined the shore batteries in firing the salute were gaily dressed with bunting. The Presidential boat passed into the harbor.

Salute From Dover Castle As the Brighton entered the harbor the salute in honor of the President was fired from Dover Castle. This was the first time since the beginning of the war that this honor had been accorded any visitor. The British path was along the line of ships of the famous Dover patrol, all of which were flying American flags and their crews lining the rails. The bands, which when the Brighton was sighted had played "God Save the King," now took up the "Star Spangled Banner," each ship's whole company standing at attention.

Files President's Flag The Brighton was flying the President's salute in honor of the King and the British naval ensign. Mrs. Wilson, who was on deck, took the greatest interest in the evolutions of the British destroyers. The President, who appeared in splendid spirits when he stepped ashore, was immediately greeted by the Duke of Connaught and the other members of the welcoming party. After reviewing the covered way he passed through the covered way to the station, where the mayor and the corporation in their scarlet robes of office extended a formal welcome.

Capt. Stackpole Home on Leave From Hospital

Captain Edward J. Stackpole, Jr., Company M, One Hundred and Tenth Regiment, Twenty-eighth division, returned from the base hospital at State Island, New York, late Tuesday night. He is on a short leave and will return to the United States General Hospital at Colonia, N. J., January 3, for further examination and treatment of his wounds. It is his hope to get home on a longer leave after a thorough surgical examination of his injuries.

Captain Stackpole returned from a base hospital in France a few days ago and while he is on crutches, having been wounded in both legs by machine gun fire, he is comfortable and has been assured of permanent recovery. He was wounded three times during the severe fighting north of the Marne, in which his regiment participated for several weeks, but finally fell in the fighting near the Aisne river, with a compound fracture of the right leg near the ankle and a bullet wound in the left thigh.

His previous injuries were the result of shrapnel in the back and a hand grenade wound in the left leg below the knee. Captain Stackpole will see his friends as soon as he is somewhat stronger, and is rejoiced to be home again.

On Board President Wilson's Special Train En Route to Calais, Dec. 25.—President Wilson left Chaumont for England late yesterday, feeling more strongly than ever the magnitude of the part American soldiers took in the winning of the war. Yesterday's review, in which 10,000 American soldiers marched, created a deep impression on the President quite apart from the historic significance of reviewing fightingmen on foreign soil for the first time.

When addressing his troops as "fellow countrymen," he told them that he believed that he could "promise them a happy New Year." This was considered the keynote of the address and friends about Mr. Wilson construed his words to mean that he was beginning to see the way more clearly toward the attainment of the objectives he has set for himself at the peace conference.

At least one very important address may be expected from the President while he is in England. It may be his line of thought more clearly on issues in which Great Britain is so deeply interested. In his address to the American troops yesterday, President Wilson said he had found no difference in the ice cream which the President considered the keynote of the address and friends about Mr. Wilson construed his words to mean that he was beginning to see the way more clearly toward the attainment of the objectives he has set for himself at the peace conference.

Yesterday's review was a picture worthy of a great painter. The sight of 10,000 American veterans carrying the United States flag on the soil of a sister republic, a comrade in arms in a great cause, was so impressive that the President could not express his emotion. He frankly admitted being "all choked up."

Mr. Wilson's visit to soldiers' billets in nearby towns long will be remembered. At one place he climbed a ladder to the loft of a stable to talk with soldiers quartered there. Everywhere the boys and girls of the little villages brought native flowers or gifts to him. One spry little miss actually hopped into his car and kissed his cheek before the President knew what was coming on. Ambassador and Madame Jusserand, who accompanied President and Mrs. Wilson to Chaumont, left for Paris at the same time that Mr. Wilson's train started toward Calais.

Albert M. Hamer, of 1100 North Second street, has returned from New York after nearly three months' service with the National War Work Council of the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Hamer enlisted October 1 for "Y" service in France and received his passport, necessary papers and tags for sailing on October 19, but was prevented from going on account of an injury received on the athletic field of Columbia University. By the time he recovered the armistice had been signed and the "Y" curtailed their shipment of men to France to several dozen a week instead of hundreds formerly sent. Hundreds of men from all over the United States had been called to New York and received the necessary training, were intensely disappointed and returned to their various homes with deep regret.

Mr. Hamer served in the passport and sailing department of the "Y" headquarters and helped in the shipping and sending of hundreds of "Y" men from New York, Boston and Portland bound for England, France, Italy, Russia, Macedonia and Mesopotamia and had a wonderful experience withal.

"Looking Forward" Well-dressed women always tire of heavy Winter hats just after the holidays. A few years ago they began putting on Spring hats almost before they had had time to break their New Year's resolutions. This year a more sensible fashion prevails. The new mid-year hats are of satin or metal brocades, beautifully made and very simply trimmed. These hats give the desired change from velvet and similar materials, yet are suitable to wear with the furs which will be necessary for several months. My new satin and brocade hats are in most becoming shapes and at a considerable range in prices. Mary Sacks North Third Street at N. 210
