FIRE LOSSES FOR

men, quickly replaced the buildings in thirty-one days. Two men, Clarence Dickey, 1117 Grape street, and Mervin Sherley, R. F. D. 4. Harrisburg, were badly burned and had to be taken to the Harrisburg hospital for treatment.

The next disastrous conflagration was at the City garage, which extends along River street, apposite the Public Library, from Walnut to Strawberry street, early in the morning of March 25. Seventy-five thousand dollars damage was caused. C. K. Wolfe is proprietor of the garage, and his loss was heavy. Fifteen new Buck machines, owned by George B. Zech, the local Buick dealer, were destroyed besides sixty other machines stored in the building. The office of the Remington Typewriter Company, in the first floor, also sustained heavy damage. Paul Guyer, a fireman, belonging to the Royal Fire Company, was injured while fighting the flames. The building belonged to the Valley Traction Company and is rebuilt. More than $3,500 was lost in a blaze which started in an oil storage tank, in which is stored the oil feeding the open hearths, at the Central Iron and Steel Company. A spark from a passing locomotive fell into a shallow reservoir under the tank, igniting the oil that had dripped there, and the heat caused the 35,000 gallons of oil in the tank to flame with a sudden blast, which brought hundreds to the scene.

35,000 gallons of oil in the tank to flame with a sudden blast, which brought hundreds to the scene.

Brakeman Is Killed

When a draft of two freight cars, about 1:30 o'clock in the morning of August 3, were switched into three oil cars on the SK hump in the Maclay street yards of the Pennsylvania railroad, the plugs from the oil cars were knocked loose, and the naphtha which spurted out was ignited from the lantern carried by Albert Burkholder, 270 Peffer street, the brakeman, who was riding the draft of freight cars. The flames spread to other freight cars standing by, and the loss was considerable. Burkholder's clothes were saturated with the blazing naphtha and he died a few days later in the Harrisburg Hospital.

The next person who fell a victim to fire in Harrisburg during 1918 lost her life in the fire which broke out in the rear of the cellar of Horace M. Witman's home at 2101 North Second street September 10, spread up the back stairs and destroyed the rear of the house. Mrs. Laura Lockhart, the maid, who was sleeping in the rear room on the the third floor, was smothered to death as she wakened from her sleep. The remaining four occupants of the house, Mr. Witman and his three children, were saved only through the heroic efforts of Leo. Raiph and Frank Harris, who were staying with their mother next door, and who brought a ladder in the nick of time and rescued the imperiled family from their precarious predicament. Thirty-five hundred doilars was the property loss.

Oil Reservoir Blazes

The Harrisburg Pipe and Pipe Bending Company was the scene of another expensive fire September 15, when the oil in a reservoir was ignited, and 40,000 gallons of quenching oil, valued at $10,000, went up in flames. The fire was started when workmen giving hot steel the quenching oil treatment to cool and draw it, fed the steel too fast.

The last fire of considerable proportions occurred at the confectionery and tobacco warehouse of Smith and Keffer, at 411 South Cameron street, December 21, where a fire of inexplicable origin swept the rear of the first floor and caused $8,000 damage to the stock and building. A second fire was caused three days later, when a fuse blew out in the elevator mechanism, but little damage resulted.

With the exception of the small Keffer blaze, the last three months have been featured by an epidemic of false alarms and insignificant blazes which caused little damage, but kept the fire companies busy.
