State Papers—If some legislator has the nerve to introduce a bill providing for an appropriation covering the cost, it may yet be possible for the people of Pennsylvania to know what the governors of this state since the days of William A. Sone have said in their official state papers. But the beautifully bound volumes titled "Papers of the Governor" cease with the administration of Gov. Stone, consequently the official pronunciamentas of Governor" cease with the administration of Gov. Stone, consequently the official pronunciamentas of Governors Pennypacker, Stuart, Tener and Brumbaugh remain hidden from the world in their original and unbeautiful form. For example, the biennial report of the secretary of the commonwealth, dated Dec. 1, 1918, credits Gov. Brumbaugh with 42 proclamation in 1918, up to Dec. 1 and 30 in 1917. During the preceding two years he issued thirteen, making a total received by the secretary of the commonwealth of 85. But there were a number which did not reach the secretary at all, so that the present governor's total is in the neighborhood of 110. These will all be available for studious Pennsylvanians if some legislator will introduce and secure the passage of a bill appropriating money for bringing "Papers of the Governor" include all of the executives messages and proclamations. Governor Erumbaugh wrote each proclamation himself in long hand, usually in the library of the executive mansion. With a long black cigar which he smokad fur-supervisors to Report.—In every county in Pennsylvania except Philadelphia, township supervisors within a few days will begin the filling of statements with the county commissioners showing in detail their activities for the year which ended December 31. These statements will show the amount of money collected by the township supervisors and the manner in which it was expended. They deal almost ending of November and October, if these efforts are continued. But the coming of November and the successfully with road work and are an illuminating commentary on the way the rural districts of Pennsylcania maintain their roads. It is estimated that the townships of Pennsylvania spend at least $3,000,000 annually in maintaining their roads.

THE GLOBE

An Announcement To the Friends and Patrons of THE GLOBE

Since the unfortunate fire in the basement of our store on Tuesday night, December 31st, hundreds of our friends and patrons have been inquiring as to when THE GLOBE will re-open.

To this question we can only say that our store will re-open as soon as the insurance adjustment is made, which we hope will be within a few days.

At that time we will have an important announcement to make.

We ask your kind indulgence.
