For Indigestion Take Bi-nesia

Costs Nothing if it Fails

Nearly everybody suffers at times after eating. Many can rarely eat without suffering the most excruciating agony. Some people call this indigestion, some dyspepsia, others gastritis; but no matter what you call it, no matter how many remedies or how many doctors you may have tried—nothing is more certain than relief may be obtained by taking a little hot water a tablespoonful of a simple neutralizer, such as Bi-nesia. This instantly neutralizes the acid and stops food fermentation, the cause of nine-tenths of all stomach trouble, and thus enables the stomach to proceed with digestion in a normal manner. Care should be taken to insist on getting the genuine Bi-nesia, which, owing to its marvelous properties, is now sold in both powder and tablet form by George A. Gorgas and leading druggists everywhere under a binding guarantee of satisfaction or money back.

One tendency to move out of the original radial line of ascent that a balloon would have, independent of wind would be due to the great difference in the velocity of the upper parts of the atmosphere. In order to keep in line radially, it is evident that a particle high up in the air must travel a greater distance in a given time than a particle at the surface of the earth.

There is another thing, however, which puts a different aspect on the matter when we consider what would happen to a balloon capable of ascending to very great heights. A somewhat surprising discovery of recent years is that at a height which varies with the latitude, being about ten and a half miles at the equator and only four or five miles at the polar regions, there appears to be a region, or level, of the air where the temperature instead of gradually decreasing with increase of height, as is the rule below, remains constant.
