SENATE LEADERS BOOM KNOX FOR THE PRESIDENCY

Pennsylvanian Is the Central Figure in Parleys in the National Capital

Washington, Jan. 8.—Senator Philander C. Knox, of Pennsylvania, today emerged as the central figure in the discussion of Republican Presidential booms for 1920. With most of the members of the Senate absent from Washington attending the Roosevelt funeral, those who remained in the capital passed the day talking politics, and especially the President-elect, Knox, which will open next winter.

The claims for support of every man who has been mentioned as a possibility since the death of the Central figure completely changed the political outlook, were carefully reviewed, and after a full day of discussion Progressive Senators declared that the President-elect, Knox, was the next standard-bearer of the Republican party.

It was pointed out by the Progressives that Senator Knox received much of the credit for the election of Theodore Roosevelt, having been Attorney General under President Roosevelt and having always been a close personal friend of the late President. Such Progressive Senators as Kenyon, of Iowa; Gronna, of North Dakota; Cummins, of Iowa, and Poinsett, of Washington, declared today that Senator Knox was their choice as standard-bearer for a united Republican party. His close association with Roosevelt would enable him to receive the support of the Progressive element in the party, they pointed out, while the conservative Republican leaders favor him to such an extent that he came within a narrow margin of being the Republican candidate in 1916, instead of Charles Evans Hughes.

Senators representing both elements in the Republican party further pointed out that Senator Knox occupies the peculiar position of being the only leading Republican whose training has equipped him to handle the grave international problems that confront the United States during the next few years. In addition to serving as United States Senator and as Attorney General under Presidents McKinley and Roosevelt, Senator Knox was Secretary of State throughout the term of President Taft.

All of the Progressive members of the Senate are not united behind Senator Knox, however. Senator Borah, of Idaho, one of the Progressive leaders, has declared in favor of Senator Warren C. Harding, of Ohio, who has been equally prominent with the junior Senator from Pennsylvania in the discussion of Presidential possibilities, and Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, who is now regarded as the spokesman for the Progressive since the death of Colonel Roosevelt, has a Presidential boom all of his own.

In Munitions Production U. S. Outdistanced Allies

Washington, Jan. 9.—Figures made public yesterday by the Ordnance Department of the Inter-Alleied Bureau of Statistics show that the production of munitions in this country had grown so rapidly that in the last months of the war the United States was far ahead of Great Britain and France. Average monthly production of machine guns and machine rifles for July, August and September, 1918, in the United States was 27,491, against 9,747 for Great Britain and 12,126 for France. In the same period the United States produced monthly an average of 233,563 rifles, against 112,821 for Great Britain and 49,522 for France. With respect to small arms ammunition, production in the United States was 277,894,000 rounds, in France 139,845,000 and in Great Britain 259,769,000. Total production from April 6, 1917, to the date of the signing of the armistice, November 11, last was given as follows: Machine guns and machine rifles: Great Britain, 181,404; France, 229,238; United States, 181,662. Rifles: Great Britain, 1,971,864; France, 1,416,056; United States, 2,506,742. Rifle and machine gun ammunition: Great Britain, 2,486,127,000; France, 2,983,875,000; United States, 2,879,148,000.

In the comparative chart attention was called to the fact that the need for the equipment of troops no longer existed, French and British production of rifles during 1918 was at a lower rate than had previously been attained.

NEWS OF THE RAILROADS SUPERINTENDENT ASKS SHORT RUNS

Spend Surplus Time With Family, Superintendent Johnson Urges

"Avoid long runs; get over the road more quickly and spend your surplus time with the family," urges Superintendent J. C. Johnson, to Middle division train crews, in his message yesterday. The official points out that the car movement on Saturday was only 4,323 past Denholm, and 334 of an interchange with the Tyrone division. Delays were due to trouble in leaving yards and terminal points, engine failures, drawdowns pulling out and similar difficulties. Mr. Johnson also states that the tonnage has been cut because of the intensity of the cold weather. He adds that too much time is being spent on the division, and cautions the crews to avoid long runs, as it means greater benefits to them and their families, as well as the company, if trains are brought in sooner.

Railroad Notes
