

CONGRESS PLANS TAX ON PRODUCT OF CHILD LABOR

House Conferees Agree That Postage Rate Fall to Two Cents After July 1

Washington, Jan. 16.—The Senate amendment to the war revenue bill, levying a tax of ten per cent, upon products of child labor entering interstate commerce and designed to have the same effect as the child labor act recently declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court, was adopted yesterday by Senate and House conferees. A separate vote on the amendment will be taken in the House before final passage of the bill.

The conferees also reached complete agreement on nearly all of the miscellaneous tax disputes and have left for disposition only a few important questions. Several of the conferees believe the bill will go to the President before January 1.

Another important Senate amendment accepted by the House conferees was that removing war taxes on first class postage next July 1, when the Post Office is to be reorganized, and on one cent for postcards would again be effective.

Senate provisions creating an advisory tax board to aid in administering the new law were adopted by the conferees after being amended to provide for a board of five members at annual salaries of $9,000.

MAJOR SMITH IS ENTERTAINED ON HIS RETIREMENT

Marsh Run Government Depot Has Grown to Great Proportions

Major Harvey B. Smith, of Minneapolis, who is depot officer at the big quartermaster cantonment near New Cumberland, will soon retire from the service and was given a dinner by the members of his staff at the Penn. Hotel last night. Major Smith has made many friends among the people of this section who will regret his departure. Yesterday afternoon he and his staff conducted a number of prominent Harrisburg men over the big plant and explained the growth of the army service depot which is likely to become an important factor in the development of the new American army. It seems to be generally understood that the character of the buildings and the general accessibility of the plant assures its retention for the uses of the army in the east. The New Cumberland depot is one of three, the other two being located at Columbus, Ohio, and Schenectady, New York.

These projects were intended as points of accumulation and shipment for army supplies of all descriptions to the army in France, all being located within twelve hours of the principal ports of embarkation. The completion and organization of these reserve depots and the signing of the armistice occurring on practically the same date, the functions of reserve depots, as a consequence, have materially changed, being now used primarily as points for permanent storage, classification, reclamation and eventual diversion of surplus army material into channels of normal consumption. The capacity of this depot is approximately 150 cars per day, and the supplies already in storage cover a great variety of war material intended for the use of all departments of the army, including ordnance, engineer supplies, medical supplies, quartermaster supplies, signal corps supplies, etc. An organized at present, the reserve depots are normally operated by army organizations with some civilian office assistance and some civilian labor. Attached to this project is a temporary camp in which at the present time are fifty commissioned officers, a guard and fire company with enlisted strength of 247 men; and colored soldiers to the number of approximately 750, organized into three companies comprising one reserve labor battalion. There is also attached to headquarters a miscellaneous enlisted personnel of 123 men and a detachment of forty enlisted Medical Corps men are on duty at the post hospital.
