

WILSON STOPS RULE FOR SECRET SESSION

Senator Clemenceau in the Chamber of Deputies today gave a warning against false reports concerning peace conference, citing as an instance a cablegram addressed to the New York Tribune.

Washington, Jan. 17.—Senator Borah, of Idaho, addressed the Senate today in protest against secrecy at the peace conference. He said the question was whether President Wilson was practicing the same diplomacy that was discarded entirely.

Russ Question Looms The question of Russia continues to be one of the most important in the minds of the delegates to the peace conference. The problem at hand is considered today as being modified, and it was believed with the assembling of the conference circles is that she must be represented.

The separate representation accorded the British colonies in the peace conference has unfavorably impressed the French colonial world. The Havas Agency has issued a note pointing out that by reason of the interchangeability of the delegates, the French government can, when necessary, call in specially qualified plenipotentiaries, and that thus the different colonial problems will be discussed with all the necessary safeguards.

British correspondents met and adopted resolutions asking that one British press representative be admitted to sittings of the congress. However, the newspapers already adopted resolutions, declaring they would be satisfied with nothing less than free access to all deliberations. These resolutions were brought before a meeting attended by representatives of the press from all the nations associated in the war against Germany.

In American official circles it was recalled that before President Wilson's departure for Europe it was announced officially at Washington that, at the President's personal request, both the British and French governments had raised all censorship restrictions on news dispatches to America concerning the peace congress.

Premier Clemenceau spoke in the afternoon in the Chamber of Deputies on the decision to keep proceedings of the peace congress secret.

"We have not yet found a final form in which communications from the peace congress will be made," he said, "but in a general way, the principle of publicity has met with favor."

Here he was interrupted by Deputy Mistrail, who said: "Except by you, M. Clemenceau."

Clemenceau Denies "I have the honor to emphatically deny that statement," the Premier rejoined. "We all should like to keep proceedings secret so that it may not be said that such and such a country made such and such a proposition which has been fought by such and such other governments. We are unanimous in thinking that that might create a bad feeling. We think that in the preliminary conversations we must, at all costs, arrive at an agreement so that there shall be a solid front at the general discussion."

Wants Full Agreement "If we wish to form a league of nations, writing phrases is insufficient. There must be a prevailing spirit which will insure the life of this league of nations. We would like to finish this war by a full agreement of the civilized nations for a supreme ideal of a better humanity."

After yesterday morning's session of the Supreme Council, President Wilson worked in his study and late in the day went for a drive. Last night he went to the Champs Elysees theater, with American officials, and enjoyed a production entitled "The Revue, 1918," given by "The Argonne Players," most of whom were soldiers.

"A Whole Regiment" Jean Martin was called after Mrs. Fannay was on the stand. She said she came to live in the house on Friday afternoon, that two men came to the house in the evening to rent two rooms, then left and did not return, and on Saturday night about 11 o'clock while alone "a whole regiment of police" came to the house, explained she came to the house on the weekend, but had been at the home early in the year helping Mrs. Fannay for two weeks, because of the latter's illness.

William B. Markley, 445 South Thirteenth street, was convicted of charges of unlawfully tapping gas pipes and after the latter had paid an unmeted fine. He was on trial yesterday, but the case did not go to the jury until the morning session. The verdict was returned at the noon adjournment.

Nat Feldstein, charged with larceny of a bicycle, was called for trial before President Judge George Kunkel this morning. He is charged with larceny of a bicycle for $32 to John Rydberg and after the latter had paid $26 took the bicycle back and did not return it in sixty days to give Rydberg retain it. The payment, as it is alleged, he had promised to do.

LEIBKNECHT, THORN IN FLESH OF HUN ROYALTY, ACCUSES THEM

KARL PAUL August Friedrich Liebknecht was born at Leipzig on August 13, 1871. After being graduated from the University of Leipzig, he entered politics as a Socialist. He was a radical opponent of the militarist policies of Germany from the first of his political career, and this attitude brought about his trial on charge of high treason in 1907, following the appearance of an anti-militarist pamphlet written by him. The charge of high treason was not proved, but he was convicted on a less serious count and sent to prison for eighteen months.

Dr. Liebknecht visited America in 1910 and lectured in New York during his stay in that city. In 1912 he was elected to the German Reichstag, from Potsdam and the next year caused a furore in Germany by bringing charges against the Krupp family, saying that that organization was inspiring war spirit against the French government. After a week of fighting, the Spartacans came to the fore and the establishment of a Socialist government, Dr. Liebknecht played a prominent part.

When the Ebert government had been in existence only a few days, Dr. Liebknecht became leader of a radical Socialist faction known as the Spartacans. Rumors came to the world that a terrorist revolution was imminent and this developed late in December. The rising tide of radicalism reached intense interest during the first week of January, when the Spartacans came into armed conflict with troops loyal to the Ebert government. After a week of fighting, the Spartacans were defeated. During the conflict it was reported several times that Dr. Liebknecht had been killed.

Rosa Luxemburg was formerly principal editor of the Vorwarts, the organ of the German Socialists. She often came into conflict with the authorities and twice underwent imprisonment for freely expressing her views on subjects connected with the government.

She was consistently opposed to the war and at one time her writings brought about criminal proceedings against leaders of the Socialist party. When the revolution broke out in Berlin early in November, she was reputed to be the leader of the most violent group of Socialists.

Later she seconded Dr. Liebknecht in his efforts to organize the Spartacans, although she strenuously opposed Dr. Liebknecht's proposal that elections for the National Assembly be held at once.

When the Spartacans uprising grew to open rebellion against the Ebert government she played an important part in urging the revolutionists to attack the government troops. When it was evident that the cause, at least for the time being, was lost, she was reported to have left Berlin.

Senator Martin announced that he would call up to measure tomorrow and leaders of both parties predicted its prompt passage.

LUXEMBURG AND LIEBKNECHT DIE

The government announced yesterday that the circumstances attending the deaths of Dr. Liebknecht and Rosa Luxemburg would be investigated and that punishment would be meted out if it appeared that the custodians of either victim had neglected their duty or had any part in the tragedy.
