

PRESS CLAIM FOR NEW ARAB STATE

Sons of Monarch Seek to Establish Nation at Peace Conference

Paris, Jan. 22.—Prince Faisal, son of the King of Hedjaz, whom he represents at the Peace Conference, is pressing his claims for the recognition of the Arab state of Hedjaz.

"The Arabs have long enough suffered under foreign domination," he said to The Associated Press today. "The hour has at last struck when we are to come into our own again. We have, I believe, an even greater right to become free and independent than any of the new states to be formed through the war, since we are the oldest democracy in the world."

"The country is inhabited almost exclusively by a homogeneous set of Arabs, all descending from a common stock, while the foreign elements are infinitesimal, certainly smaller than in any other country I know of. There are only about two thousand Turkish officials and no Turkish population in a land containing three and one-half million Arabs. Why then should not the Arabs rule the country where they live and have lived for countless generations? Why should we not be masters in our own house?"

Defeated Turks "As a small struggling nation we have already done much," said the prince. "King Hussein, my father, commonly called 'the grand old man of the east,' declared war against Turkey when she was at the height of her military glory, and invited volunteers to his standard. Soon quite a considerable army collected, which under my personal leadership, inflicted on the Turks a series of defeats culminating in taking of Medina.

"The two usual objections made to our ambitions," continued the prince, are: 'Have you enough civilization to govern themselves?' And 'will you have enough money to carry on your state?'"

"To the first I unhesitatingly say

Yes! The world must not forget that it is Arabs who largely govern the country at this very moment, and all over the world Arabs have shown their worth as merchants and administrators. There must be some six or seven thousand Arabs fighting in the American army, as there are 250,000 Arabs in America.

Look to America "As for the second question, I also answer in the affirmative, for our country is a rich one. It contains large quantities of copper, iron, mineral oils and a little coal, while, when properly irrigated, it is perhaps one of the most fertile in the world."

"I address this appeal to the American people," said Prince Faisal in conclusion, "because I believe American public opinion to be the chief factor in deciding our fate. I also address them because I have complete faith in them. Even in the furthest corner of my own continent America is the friend of all oppressed, and the enemy of all oppressors; that to her all oppressed may come, sure of finding patient ears to listen and strong arms to uphold the weak if the claims are found to be just."

"At this moment the eyes of the whole East are turned toward America. It is up to her now to show that our faith is not misplaced."

Will Make Effort to Extradite Thaw Through Gov. Sprout

New York, Jan. 22.—District Attorney Swann announces that with a new Governor in office in Pennsylvania, he would resume his efforts to bring about extradition of Harry K. Thaw.

The District Attorney said that he was anxious to place Thaw on trial on a charge of kidnapping and assaulting Frederick Gump, a sixteen-year-old Kansas City boy, in 1916.

Former Governor Brumbaugh, he said, had declined to honor an extradition warrant for Thaw, who is under surveillance in the Pennsylvania State Hospital for the Insane. Governor Smith, he added, would be asked to request Governor Sprout to turn Thaw over to the New York authorities.

Reported Dead in France, Returns Home to Find Wife Married Again

Allentown Soldier Will Not Disturb Wife Who Took Second Husband; 'She's a Mighty Fine Girl,' He Says

Allentown, Pa., Jan. 22.—To come home from France after having been reported dead and to find his wife married to another man, is the experience of Miles C. Roth, a cited hero of the Pennsylvania Division. Private Roth is as far as known here, the first Pennsylvania. Enoch Arden of the great war, and his romance even surpasses that of the hero of Tennyson's poem.

Private Roth left the innocent wife in happy possession of her second husband. In this case the second spouse followed the first as a crusader in France against the Hun. Also, there are two children.

A short time after the battle of the Marne, news trickled back that a number of Allentown soldiers had been killed and wounded. Miles Roth, a Lehigh county boy, with a record of fifteen years in the National Guard as a soldier of Company D, old Fourth Pennsylvania, a private life he was chief at the Hotel Lehigh, as a guard man at Mount Gretna and on the Mexican border he was popular because he supervised the mess of his command and was a master of the culinary art.

Came Near Death The first news from across the sea was that he had been gassed and while unconscious blown to pieces by a high explosive.

It turns out that on July 22 last, after he had moved the kitchen outfit to the 108th Machine Gun Battalion close up to the fighting and was furnishing food to the fighters and assisting the wounded, a German shell exploded within ten feet of him. Four men were killed and it was thought Private Roth was also among the slain. The rescue squad that came along some hours later discovered he was not dead, and he was taken back to a hospital. There it was found that although not dead, few men had ever been closer to extinction.

The force of the Hun shell had dislocated the joints, both knee joints and both elbow joints, besides knocking out his teeth and inflicting some other injuries. In addition he suffered from the effects of gas. The reducing of the dislocated joints was easy work for the surgeons, but even now he walks stiffly and he has not entirely recovered from the shell shock and gassing. Peter Gatenski, Pittston, reported dead when he returned to Allentown last Saturday morning

79TH TROOPS BEAT HUN'S BEST

Heavy Casualties Laid to Fact That Supporting Artillery Was Out of Range

Philadelphia.—Major John Lewis Evans, of Haverford, who returned from France last week and was discharged at Camp Dix a few days ago, tells of the punishment sustained by the 79th Division in the last few weeks of fighting in the war. The 79th Division was principally made up of drafted men from Pennsylvania.

He told of how the 79th Division was sneered at after its first five days in actual fighting because the division did not attain all its objectives. "But the division that succeeded us," Major Evans said, "did not gain a foot of ground and when that got around there was a difference of about 100 yards. After that and after that the 79th went in along the Meuse and 'showed them.'"

Hill 304 Occupied "The 79th went into a historic sector at Verdun a few days before the big drive of September 26. We occupied Hill 304, famous as the scene of fighting during the great German drives at Verdun. But the sector had been quiet for a long time and there was a sort of gentlemen's agreement between the Germans and the French that resulted in no firing at all. It was extremely peaceful when we took hold.

"I remember one day that one of our boysights a Hun and looked for like a good shot to him. He had his rifle hunched up to his shoulder and was just about ready to fire when a French soldier saw him, and he dragged him back with horror in his eyes. He begged the American not to 'start something,' using whatever French equivalent there is for that expression.

"When we started our five-day drive our procession on the first day hardly started at all. And that took us away from our artillery. There had been a tremendous artillery preparation. So many guns had been fired that the air almost literally bubbled at 75's and heavies. The firing started at 2 A. M. and gradually increased in volume until it was impossible to hear yourself think.

NATION'S BUREAUS ARE PLANNING FOR BONE DRY NATION

Force of 500 Agents to Enforce Wilson Order Must Greatly Enlarged After July 1, Officials Believe; Signs Point to Illegal Making of Liquor

Washington, Jan. 22.—Means of enforcing prohibition after July 1 are under consideration by officials of the Department of Justice and the Internal Revenue Bureau, but steps to create a special enforcement agency will not be taken until Congress has had time to act on pending legislation giving this function to the revenue bureau.

This bureau now has about 500 agents who could be assigned to liquor violation detection, including 300 now engaged partly in running down illicit liquor distillers. Officials believe, however, that this force would have to be enlarged by several times. The Department of Justice also stands ready to assign many of its secret agents to prohibition enforcement.

The bulk of enforcement work, however, would fall on state and local police authorities. Government agents would operate only in districts where the local officials seemed unable or unwilling to force the law.

Revenue agents say there are indications of preparations for the dry era among those who propose to manufacture liquor after July 1. Not only the southern mountains, the principal operating regions of moonshiners, but in large cities of the east and middle west, small distilleries have been found recently. Some of these are said to have admitted their intention of putting them in operation after prohibition becomes effective.

The advent of prohibition, officials say, will not repeal revenue laws, but will not repeal revenue laws, nor existing provisions for fines and imprisonment as penalties for illicit manufacturing liquor.

Metal Tradesmen on Strike; Paralyze Shipbuilding Work

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 22.—Between 25,000 and 37,000 members of the Metal Trades Unions in Seattle, Tacoma and Anacortes are on strike today, paralyzing the major portion of Washington's shipbuilding industry. Another 8,000 woodworkers employed in shipbuilding may be forced out through inability of the yards to operate without the metal trades workers, their leaders say.

The strike was orderly, leaders discouraging even parades. At Tacoma about 10,000 trades workers struck, closing four yards. The men are dissatisfied with wage adjustment brought about by Government agents.
