Bushman Murder Trial Opens; Select but Two Jurymen From 40 Called

Gettysburg, Pa., Jan. 28.-The ppening of the trial of the Bushman murder case has been delayed longe: than had been expected. It was the middle of the afternoon before Clarence Collins, one of the youths who is alleged to have confessed as one of the slayers of George Bushman, was taken into the court room. The Grand Jury held the case longer than it was thought they would and the true bill against Collins was not returned to the court until the afternoon was partly gone. It was then decided that separate trial of Collins and Reinecker should be held. Attorneys on both sides had agreed that the men could be tried together, but the court held that as all the charges and bills of indictment had been made out separately, the men should be tried separtely. A true bill was also found against Reinecker, but it had been determined to try Collins first. The work of selecting the jury began immediately. Although about forty men have been called and examined, only two have been accepted. is alleged to have confessed as one of
