Conferees Agree on Most Features of Revenue Bill

Reach Agreement on War Excess Profits Rates; Possibility of Deadlock and Failure of the Bill Pass

Washington, Jan. 28.—The conference report on the war revenue bill is expected to be presented to the Senate and House late this week and the conferees hope that it will be adopted by both bodies next week and the bill sent to the President at Paris for his approval.

This seemed evident last night after a basis for complete agreement on the bill was reached by the Senate and House conferees. Senator Simmons, chairman of the Senate managers, announced that virtually all important questions remaining in dispute, including the war excess profits rates, had been agreed upon and that all possibility of a deadlock and failure of the bill had passed.

Announcement of the conference agreement on the war profits and other basic disputes was made, but it was said that it would be made Wednesday or Thursday, when a reprint of the bill as finally agreed to will be completed.

Eliminate Mail Amendment The basis of agreement on the measure was upon three bitterly contested questions—war excess profits taxes this year, the Senate allowances to oil and gas interests and the Senate amendment to repeal the existing zone system of second class mail rates. It was learned that in harmonizing differences in these basic disputes, the conferees agreed to an increase of the Senate war excess profits rates adopted by the House, and eliminated the second class mail amendment.

Other Provisions Certain With the basis reached for settling these three vital disputes, agreement on other provisions of the bill still left open was regarded as certain. Among these are the amendment to prevent importation of intoxicating liquor into the District of Columbia for beverage purposes; the amendment of Senator Thomas, of Colorado, levying a tax of 100 per cent. on political campaign contributions in excess of $500; and that of Senator Trammell, of Florida, to allow a bonus of one month's pay and uniforms to men discharged from the military service.

Senate Wins on Oil Tax The Senate conferees were reported to have won their fight for retention of the Senate provision for a tax exemption of 20 per cent. on bona fide sales of oil and gas wells and mines. This provision, designed to protect and stimulate prospectors, was opposed by the House managers as too liberal, but they finally yielded after the Senate conferees had accepted the higher rates on war excess profits.

Elimination of the second class postage amendment had been generally expected. The proposal has been bitterly opposed by Representative Kitchin and other of the House conferees. It provided for repeal of the present zone rate on second class mail based on the proportion of news and advertising and for substitution of a new zone plan of one cent a pound on periodicals within the first and second class parcel post zones and one and one-half cents a pound beyond that radius. The present rates have been vigorously attacked by publishers as unjust and in some cases confiscatory.

Other amendments remaining to be acted upon are several of the so-called "relief" provisions of the Senate war excess profits section, some dependent upon the basis of agreement on rates reached by the conferees. Many administrative provisions also remain for final action.

James Robinson, powerhouse operator, of 412 North Forty-second street; struck on head with revolver; treated at Garretton Hospital.

When Herron and Knox closed in on the maniac, who held a revolver in each hand, he pushed one against each policeman. The weapon held against Knox went off, and the bullet pierced the policeman's heart. The revolver pressed against Police Officer Herron failed, and Herron fired his own revolver into the groin of the madman and then clubbed him on the head, knocking him down and disarming him before taking him to the Garretton Hospital, where the physicians say he is either insane or shamming madness.

Limbo, for two years, broke in repeatedly on church services by entering the church and walking down the aisle, beating the organ, and chanting loudly to himself. He was repeatedly put out of churches, but never exhibited the slightest violence when led out and was therefore regarded as a harmless fanatic. Finally, however, he became boisterous and hysterical when he was ordered out of a church and was then committed to the Philadelphia Hospital.

In the days when he broke in on church services, Limbo wore a beard, which gave him a striking resemblance to the conventional picture of Christ, a fact which added weirdness to his claim that he was the son of Christ.

During his period of restraint at the Philadelphia Hospital, Limbo mutilated himself. How he got out of the Philadelphia Hospital is not known by the city detectives, but they are endeavoring through investigation to learn if he is the insane man from Philadelphia who last week appeared in Washington, where he attacked two policemen, one of them made his escape.

"I am a Jew, but I have embraced Christianity and have planned for several years to devote myself to the study of electrical power," he told the police, who found a notebook in his pocket with the address of all the Rapid Transit Company's power plants. "I never worked but lived with my mother until she died, six years ago. She left me $2,000, and I have lived off that ever since, very economically. I ate only fish and vegetables and water. But to-day my money was all spent. I had nothing more to live on or live for, so I started out to do this one big thing for which I had prepared all my life."

"I went out this morning and bought two revolvers in West Philadelphia, one for $10.50 and $11.50 for the other. Then I bought 100 cartridges in South street and started out on my mission. I carried my revolvers for defense only. I did not want to get caught until I had put all the powerhouses out of commission. I would not have shot anybody at the first powerhouse, ready or not, but I was verified by a search of his room. It was filled with books, religious, scientific and anarchistic books in English, Italian and German.

One note in a diary kept by the maniac refers to "three accidents in Philadelphia," and on this point he was questioned repeatedly by the detectives, who think it refers to the three bombs exploded here recently. But the maniac answered all questions about the "three accidents" with smiles and with a, "it doesn't matter," switched off to another subject.
