BRYAN GLAD TO SEE REPUBLICANS WIN IN PENNA.

Tells of Long Fight Against Liquor Interests and Results of Victory

Appearing before two thousand persons who crowded into Chestnut Street Auditorium, William Jennings Bryan, former Secretary of State, and Frank B. Willis, ex-Governor of Ohio, brought many cheers and much applause from the large audience in two stirring addresses on national prohibition.

"The two speakers came here under the election, I only wish that the League, and so large a crowd turned out that it was necessary to hold an overflow meeting in the Reformed Salem Church, Bryan, in his address with the statement that this morning at Washington he would witness the signing of the State sign the last document which would eventually free the country from the liquor traffic and that witnessing that scene would be one of the greatest moments of his life, telling of his own experience which has been waged against the breweries and distilleries.

Mr. Bryan commended the lawyers who represented the liquor interests and then paid a great tribute to Governor William C. Spry and the state he took on the prohibition question. Mr. Bryan's praise of the present chief executive of this state was so high that Governor Spry had to had won by a million votes instead of a quarter million. I have great respect for Mr. Spry in making his fight in Pennsylvania." Mr. Bryan then referred to the efforts of the Democratic party in fighting the liquor interests and of the results achieved.

Ex-Governor Willis in his talk also praised Pennsylvania and said that the liquor traffic will not be classed as a "slacker" and that its Legislature will ratify the amendment. He quoted many arguments advanced by the liquor publications and then referred them in a sweeping and convincing manner. Comparing liquor traffic to anarchism in that it has no respect for the law, he said that the liquor traffic is a "slacker" and that its Legislature will ratify the amendment. He quoted many arguments advanced by the liquor publications and then referred them in a sweeping and convincing manner.

PENBROOK WATER CASES HELD OVER

City Authorities to Determine if Water Can Be Furnished to the District

Hearing of the complaints of people of the Penbrook-Progress district against the service of the Penbrook Extension and Susquehanna township water companies was continued by the Public Service Commission to-day at request of counsel because the city of Harrisburg has not completed its surveys to determine whether water from the city system can be supplied to the companies.

And according to the statement made to the commission to-day the companies asked Dr. S. F. Hassler, Harrisburg city commissioner in charge of the service, for information as to whether or not the city could supply water to the companies. Dr. Hassler informed the attorneys that the levels had not been run and probably could not be for several weeks. A number of other matters in connection with the proposition are also to be taken up, it was stated.

Make Plans to Enlarge the Juniata College

Huntington, Pa., Jan. 29.—At the quarterly meeting, considerable time was given to the consideration of the work and plans for next session. Plans for enlarging the college, increasing the scope of departments and an architect charged other departments were discussed. The committee which was appointed some time ago to prepare plans for the enlargement of the college has been engaged by an architect to visit the grounds and buildings. The architect has also been engaged to prepare plans for the extension of the college plant and erection of new dormitories and buildings.

SCENE FROM THE SENSATIONAL MELODRAMATIC SUCCESS, "SEVEN DAYS' LEAVE," AT THE ORPHEUM TOMORROW AND SATURDAY

It has often been said, and considerable evidence has been produced to prove it, that great war plays are never written until after the conflict, and peace terms were signed. Among the plays which wish that they were "Shenandoah" and "Secret Service," both products of the American Civil War in 1861. However, a big exception to this rule is "Seven Days' Leave," which comes to the Orpheum Friday and Saturday matinee. This war play has a six months' run at the Lyceum Theater, London, England; besides being played in at least four other countries at the present time.

MUSICAL COMEDY AT THE ORPHEUM

"Miss Blue Eyes" Is Enjoyed by Audience Last Night

Adventures of two divorce lawyers, one married, the other engaged, together with plenty of tuncful selections, make "Miss Blue Eyes," presented at the Orpheum Theater last night, an enjoyable musical comedy production.

Pidgeon and Widgast, divorce lawyers, first are presented with a demand from the bride-to-be and the wife, to discontinue their business of breaking matrimonial bonds in the courts. Then they go to a restaurant not knowing that it is the place their wives had intended to give them a surprise dinner. Later the play is riddled on a charge of violating liquor laws and all of them are arrested. Some of the best comedy is furnished when Widgast, just released after a hearing on a charge of being in the act of presenting a justice when his wife and her sister are called for trial.

The cast includes Winnie Archer as Mrs. Widgast; Harvey D. Orr, as John Widgast; Will Powers, Charles R. Pidgeon, as the bridegroom; Tom Temple, Gwendolyn Turner, Pidgeon's fiancée; Gladys Fisher, as Beatrice Mason, "Honeyauklee." In the last scene, Richard Lewis, as Robert Ridley, engaged to Beatrice; Marjorie Bonner, as Sylvia Bonner, fiancée of the bridegroom; later hostess at Honeyauklee Inn. May Delour and Percy Oakes, in minor parts, but splendid dancers, appeared in a waltzing dance as sensational as ever presented here. Their work was enjoyed by the audience, and the applause started long before they had finished. Musical numbers which were "Honeyauklee," "Maud Miller," and a number of songs by a male trio. MAX ROBERTSON.

ENGLAND WRITES HISTORIC EPIC DURING GREAT WAR

New York.—"An American would be lacking in imagination or his reasoning dulled by prejudice if he did not recognize the stupendous epic wrought by England in the last four years," said James M. Beck, at the recent meeting of the Pilgrims of the United States. "Her soldiers entered Bagdad, the city of the Caliphs," Mr. Beck continued. "English soldiers passed by the ruins of Nineveh and Babylon and pitched their tents in the shadow of the Pyramids. They entered Damascus, crossed the great battlefield of antiquity, the Medi-
