Why Did She Mock Him?

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am seventeen and have been going about with a very handsome man of twenty-three for about two years. Of course, we have been no more than friends.

The other day I received a very eloquent letter expressing his love for me. He never had given me cause to think seriously of him. I letter of apology or ask him to come answered in a mocking letter, to see you? ter as a joke. In reply I received a

To Make European Baggage Smashers Go Easy With President's Luggoge Is His Job

Europe is accompanied by an official guardian of his luggage. He is a doughboy. As a sign of his authority to supervise the continental and English baggage smashers he carries a small presidential flag on a staff.

Your Monogram

Have it printed on your stationery, on both letter sheet and envelope. The young lady or gentleman who would be distinctive invariably has the initials of the name prettily formed into a monogram and printed on the letters that bear the written messages through the mails. Our facilities for turning out this class of work are altogether modern. Care and promptness have won for us many patrons. Get in touch with us about your printing needs. You will not regret joining our company of satisfied customers. It will pay you.

This photograph shows President Wilson shaking hands with Tho Watson, a native of Carlisle, En gland, now ninety years old. When the President visited Carlisle, the childhood home of his mother, he met Mr. Watson, who told him that he attended the Sunday school class conducted by the President's grandfath er.

Statue by Rodin, Stolen by Hun Invaders, Found by French Soldiers Seeking Mines

Germany will not have to pay for one stolen work of art. It is a statue by Rodin which French soldiers are seen here removing from a hole they dug while trying to locate mines planted by the Huns under the roadways as they retreated. The statue was unearthed nearboual. This, the French consider, is convincing evidence of the systematic despoiling and looting of art treasures by German officers.

Chosen to Represent Irish Republic at Paris Peace Conference, but Is in Jail

Prison bars stand between Professor Edward de Valera and a trip to Paris as a delegate to the Peace Conference to represent the Irish Republic. Three delegates were chosen after the Irish Parliament adopted a declaration of independence. The others are Count Plunkett and Arthur Griffiths. The lat-ter also is in jail. This photograph h shows Professor de Valera whilemaking an anti-conscription speech before a large crowd of Sinn Feiners.
