tion that good war plays are not written until after the fignting has ceasined. One of the glowing exceptions to this rule is "Seven Days' Leave," the Walter Howard comedy, which is closing a two days' engagement at the Orpheum to-night. Eddie" and "Oh, Boy!" its predecessors.

The Comstock-Elliott Company feels that the public has taken so strongly to the smart, intimate type of Princess Theater musical plays, because it is tired of the old type, ragtime, plotless musical comedy which has become entirely passe.

There is nothing old about the Princess Theater offerings. Their productions are the very best, their companies are composed of the highest-salaried players and the girls are youthful and pretty and each girl in the entire company is gowned in a costume to fit her personality and individuality.

All of which has spelled success for the youngest and most successful producer in the theatrical world.
