

CHARITY BALL IS GREAT SUCCESS

Sum Cleared Last Night Far Exceeds Every Expectation

Four thousand dollars for charity—it was worthwhile, all the planning, the trouble and energy spent to make that sum in one night, wasn't it? Fun and frolic ran riot last evening at the great charity ball held in the Penn-Harris and the costumes of the dancers were of every period and country from the Flood to the present day.

The Governor and Mrs. William C. Sprout, the Lieutenant Governor and Mrs. Edward E. Beidleman, Mrs. Marlin E. Olmsted and Lewis S. Sadler, State Highway Commissioner, were among those receiving. Supper parties were made up by the guests themselves for the grill room and there seemed to be as much fun there as anywhere.

Never has Harrisburg seen such an amazing number of beautiful costumes, both fancy dress for the masqueraders and exquisite satins and brocaded chiffons of the guests who came unmasked, some to dance and many who sat around the ballroom and held little informal tagfests and drank the beauty of the scene before them.

Miss Dora Wickersham Coe, as a Blue Devil, danced with a demure little Kuaukeress; Mrs. Ross A. Hickok, Mr. and Mrs. Henderson Gilbert, as Scotch Highlanders, exchanged dances with the little Quakeress, and a tall gentleman in a costume of the period of 1812. Next on the scene appeared the balloon girl, Miss Nell Sweeney, garbed in bright red chiffon, with big black hat and balloons of every size bobbing about as she danced with a Mandarin of Highlander. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goldborough were there as Pierrette and Pierrot; Mrs. Robert McCreath, as a Persian lady; Mrs. Henry Blake Bent as an Egyptian and Miss Mary Creighton as a Chinese lady.

Mrs. Lesley McCreath wore an effective costume of the Alsatian peasant, while her husband was costumed as a Mandarin. Mrs. Nell Salsich wore the bright colored garb of the Russian lady, while Miss Almada Herman wore the beautiful costume of the Chinese lady worn on dress occasions. Nell Salsich was an East

Indian and Carl Willis Davis a Alpine climber.

Mr. Carl Willis Davis wore a handsome costume of brocaded satin worn by her great-grandmother on a state occasion many years ago. Miss Mary Stamin, as a Quakeress, and Miss Katherine Stamin in a Russian skating costume, were there with their house guest, Miss Katharine Courson, of Scranton, as a fan striking and clever masquerader flashing in and out as the dance progressed. Among the beautiful gowns worn by guests who did not masquerade was the one of black lace over satin, with trimmings of jet and fringe, worn by Mrs. William Cameron Sprout, Mrs. Edward E. Beidleman, wife of the Lieutenant Governor, was crowned in watermelon satin, with draperies of black lace and chiffon, and a girde of silver. Mrs. Marlin E. Olmsted's gown was of silver cloth with heavy pearl trimmings and with she wore a striking headdress of pearls and peacock feathers and carried a large fan of peacock feathers.

Mrs. W. Harry Baker wore a brocaded satin of watermelon shade. Mrs. John C. Orr, black velvet; Mrs. Arthur H. Bailey, brocaded satin of a pale shade of pink. Mrs. George Porter Hammond, apple gray. Miss Clara Claster, silver cloth and silver lace with girde brocaded in sequins; Mrs. John Fox Weiss, royal blue tulle over satin, with bodice of velvet with sequin trimmings; Miss Evelyn Cumber, peachblow satin brocaded in silver; Mrs. Herman Tasig, marine blue satin; Mrs. Philip Meredith, silver blue tulle with black net; Miss Ruth Fay, silver gray panne velvet; Mrs. J. Austin Brandt, Nile green satin brocaded in silver; Mrs. Joseph L. Shearer, Jr., green brocaded chiffon brocaded in silver; Mrs. W. P. Starkey, black net with cloth of gold; Mrs. Robert H. Irons, white silver satin with bodice of sequins; Mrs. Henry Claster, royal blue robe of net and sequins; Miss Jeanette Claster, victory red satin with silver cloth; Mrs. Garfield Smith, apple green brocaded satin with bodice of silver lace; Miss Marion Hean, satin in a deep orchid shade.

Among the many groups that gathered together last evening when refreshments were served, the most interesting, of course, was that of the committee in charge with Mrs. Marlin E. Olmsted at its head. Governor and Mrs. Sprout were guests of honor and some of the others were: Miss Anne McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Henderson Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. John Fox Weiss, Mr. and Mrs. Ross A. Hickok, Mr. and Mrs. Francis J. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Herman, Dr. and Mrs. William E. Wright, Mrs. Edward Marshall, Lewis S. Sadler, of Carlisle, and Frank J. Brady.

The Bishop's Daughter Bride at Noon Today

Beautiful Ceremony in St. Stephen's Protestant Episcopal Church; Bride's Father Officiates; DeKoven Wedding March Is Played at Ceremony

MRS. JOEL ELLIS FISHER

If the old adage: "blest be the bride the sun shines on" be true, the married life of Lieut. and Mrs. Joel Ellis Fisher will be crossed only by the shadows accentuating the sunlight.

At high noon today, in old St. Stephen's Protestant Episcopal Church the marriage of Miss Eleanor Townsend Darlington, daughter of the Bishop of Harrisburg and Mrs. James Henry Darlington, to Lieut. Joel Ellis Fisher of the U. S. N. Reserves, was solemnized in the presence of a large gathering of their friends.

Prior to the service Alfred C. Kuschwa, the organist, gave a program of classics with German numbers eliminated. The De Koven wedding march was played here for the first time, part of it as a pre-arranged for the bride party, and the beautiful march in its entirety as a recessional. The half hour organ recital included: Marche Nuptiale, Gullman; The Master Bell, Wheelton; Magnificat, Clausmann; Wedding Day in Trolldhaugen, Grieg; Love Song, Nevin, and during the ceremony "At the Altar," Arensky, was played.

Masses of Lilies. Graceful garlands of southern smilax and masses of tall calla lilies formed the church decorations in beautiful effect at chancel and altar, and the choir stalls were decorated with bunches of lilies tied with silver rope to the standards.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Lieutenant Gilbert S. B. Darlington, United States Navy, wore an exquisite costume of white satin with court train and garnitures of old family rose point lace. Her tulle veil hung from a point lace coronet and she carried a French military bouquet of white orchids, gardenias and lilacs. Her only ornament was the bridegroom's gift, a necklace of pearls. Miss Kate Brampton Darlington who was maid of honor for her sister, wore a quaint girlish frock of yellow taffetas and Georgette crepe in Pompadour effect with hat of yellow tulle garlanded with spring flowers. Her bouquet was of yellow roses, daisies and orchids.

In Bridal Party. The bridesmaids, Mrs. James Lenox Banks, of New York, the bridegroom's sister, Miss Elizabeth Remsen Thompson, Miss Caranall Carroll and Mrs. George Mahall, all of New York, were charming in their frocks of taffetas in two shades of blue, with touches of silver lace and garlands of tiny flowers showing through the chiffon draperies. Their

A Great Event in My Twice-in-a-Twelve-Month Sale Monday Coat Reductions $7,700 Worth For $2,200. All day to-day, my shop was crowded by women of taste and discernment. They expected to find values entirely beyond their experience of "sales." What they actually found completely surpassed their expectations. "The most incredible suit sale Harrisburg has ever seen!" exclaimed one woman. Nearly all of the many suits were sold. You will see bargains quite as hard to credit at Monday's coat sale. Every one of these coats is a good purchase at the regular price. The styles are authentic, and can to-day, match the displays on Fifth Ave. The only reason for pricing them so low is that they are winter coats. Most of our winter is yet to be expected, but I need every inch of space, and every dollar to stock up with spring fashions. I am sacrificing these goods now. Most stores would try to get rid of them gradually, at slight reductions. But I want my racks to be entirely cleared this coming week. Then I can fill them at once with a new, fresh stock, direct from New York. This policy costs me money, but it will pay in the long run. It means a reputation for carrying only the newest, latest, up-to-the-minute models. 14 coats of Tyrol wool, velours, Bolivia and silverstone. Many trimmed. Never at less than $50. Many previously $60, $65 and $70. $27.50. 22 coats of above named materials. Always previously at least $60. Some of them $70, $75 and $80 coats. $47.50. 24 coats in this group. Not one ever previously priced below $70. Several $100 and $125 coats included. $65.00. 11 coats included at this price. All were previously $100 or over. The majority are $150 garments. $69.50. A Few Fur Coats Offered at Unusual Reductions. Mary Sachs, North Third Street at No. 210.
