

CRUSADE AGAINST COLLEGE COACHES STARTS; WILLARD AGREES TO MEET DEMPSEY JULY 4

"Out With College Coach" Stirs Up Bitter Objections

Shall the college coach be eliminated as the big question now being discussed in all the schools. To put it mildly, the future of this athletic three collection—The Harvard Crimson, the Princeton Princetonian and the Yale Daily News—adopted a resolution outlining the policy of the papers toward college athletics. The college dailies will advocate the hiring of an all-year-around coach by each university, with assistants in various branches, but eliminating the specialist who coaches one team for a few months. The editors also went on record as opposed to sharp reductions in athletic squads during a season, favoring a more general participation in all sports by the student body. Another proposal which the papers will endorse is the formation of a department of physical training in each college, with rigid physical examinations for all entering students.

Concluding, the resolution says that "the three dailies shall bend their energies to bring about a general improvement in college athletics and do all in their power to remedy their faults, so that intercollegiate athletics may be representative of the highest ideals of amateur sportsmanship."

On top of this National Collegiate A. A. at its recent New York meeting passed a resolution favoring the abolition of professional coaching, and urging universal athletic training for the student masses throughout the country under the supervision of each college faculty. Proselyting for star athletes, the ancient institution of college athletics and time-honored system of specialized athletes, nursed and fostered by specialized coaches, must be swept aside to make after-the-war reconstruction of college athletics successful in the fullest degree, according to the men who sponsored the resolution adopted by the National body. The moss-entrapped customs of Kaiser Bill's time must follow him into oblivion.

The new move has started a fierce objection from famous coaches who say the colleges for their attitude George Foster Sanford, who developed football winners at Rutgers the last few years, says that college faculties have always taken the wrong view of the football coach. He says they have always regarded him as a "man under suspicion" rather than regarding him in his true light as one who has probably more influence in shaping the character of the students under his control than any one in the universities.

"Our American college faculties are composed of men of high purpose and example, men who typify both the value and dignity of scholarship. The character of the American youth is greatly enriched through association with these men, and the influence they spread. Consequently it is in no sense the intention to belittle faculty influence, but it is intended to show that there exists an influence equally potent, one that should co-operate with this faculty influence to attain even further ends. I mean that influence for good that a man in charge of athletic teams can exert by his example and means that a great opportunity is being neglected through the failure to fully appreciate just what a coach can accomplish toward the general moral uplift—that that coach is so minded and directed.

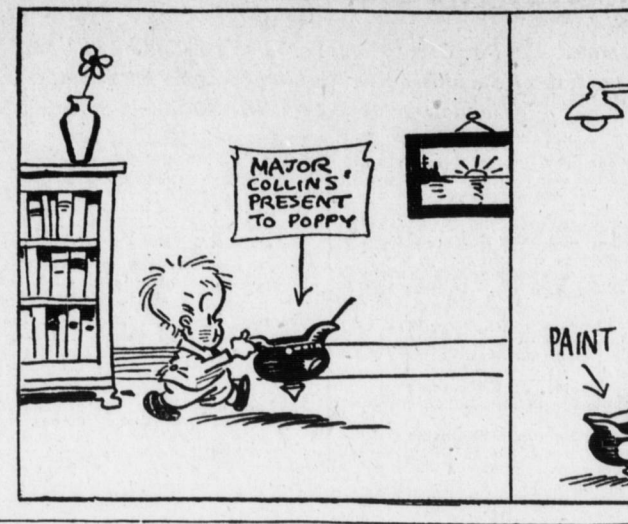

"For years the coach has been the subject of much criticism by college faculties and has been tolerated practically in the light of necessity. They resent (first) the amount of salary he is able to command; second, they resent the prominence that is given to his work. Often they speak of Coach This or That's team, without even the mention of the college which the team represents. Third, they are continually in a state of mental unrest for fear that the coach, or the team as typical of him, will do something to bring the college before the public in an unfavorable light. As a remedy they suggest less prominence for the coach, and economy even to the extent of doing away with this professional coach—or, if tolerated, let it be under formulated conditions that will effectively keep the coach from any responsibility for criticism that the college and team may undergo.

Sanford maintains that a coach makes the team if he is the real thing. It should be the coach, not the team, that is the real thing.

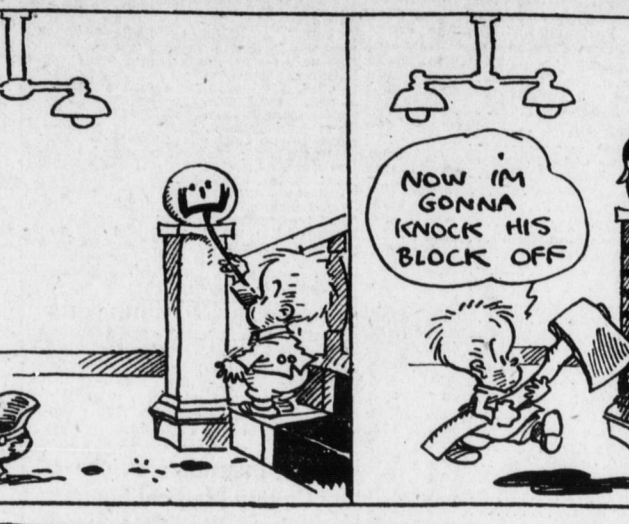

"As Robert Bruce defied despair so should the coach stand for unflinching and persistent endeavor. He should instill and inculcate this so thoroughly in the teams of the institution that it should become a characteristic of all the efforts of the entire studentsbody, athletic or otherwise. It is a plain unvarnished truth that the athletic teams of a college are the pride and glory of the college, and the rank and file have it, too. The faculty gives these men the mental tools and teaches their use, but the character and temperament of the college temperaments, qualifies the manner of their application.

"If the coach permits impressions to develop, such as 'team interest' or 'team spirit', and if he looks at any cost, or shuts his eyes to the existence of personal aggrandizements or fails to impress upon his charges that organized athletics have their place and should be abandoned after graduation, he has been instrumental in developing an undesirable undergraduate temperament. He is an undesirable coach, no matter how successful in athletic success he may attain. In fact, he has taught his charges to fight wrong, whereas if he wakes up to the full appreciation of the endeavor to encourage the development of scholarship and serious-mindedness and that subordination of self to team play, which, in the larger sense, is nothing short of the true spirit of community interest."

Willard Fights Dempsey Forty Rounds July 4

By Associated Press
New York, Feb. 5.—Jack Kearns, manager for Jack Dempsey, last night reached an oral agreement with "Tex" Rickard, whereby he matched Dempsey to meet Jess Willard for $27,500, and one-third of the motion picture rights. The time and place of the match were not fixed.

Both Kearns and Rickard agreed to post $5,000 when the agreement is signed on Dempsey's arrival here from Salt Lake City. Rickard will post 25 per cent of Dempsey's share sixty days before the bout.

Fifty-five minutes of discussion was required before the promoter and Dempsey's manager reached a mutual financial plan.

Kearns opened the conference by offering to match Dempsey against Willard for one-third of $100,000, the amount the champion is to receive, but Rickard refused absolutely to pay $33,333 to the Salt Lake City heavyweight and counter-acted with a proposition of $25,000 and one-third of the motion picture rights. Kearns finally reduced his terms to $20,000 and Rickard raised his to $27,500 and for a time neither appeared willing to change his figures.

The conference was held in the presence of a number of newspaper writers and when the deadlock had continued for some time, Rickard suggested that the size of Dempsey's share of the purse be left to them. A blind ballot was taken and Rickard's figures won by a margin of almost three to one.

With the main detail settled the other features were easily arranged. An understanding was reached that the terms would be drawn up in legal form and the contract signed as soon as Dempsey reaches this city, which will probably be not later than Friday.

In addition to the forfeit deposits, Rickard agreed to pay the traveling expenses of Dempsey and his training party in case the fight was held outside of North America. Willard and Dempsey will have the selection of the referee, who must be agreeable to Rickard, and in case the two fighters cannot agree, the promoter will then name his choice, which will be final. Rickard said that under no circumstances would he act as the referee, as he did in the Johnson-Jeffries fight in Reno on July 4, 1919.

No date or place for the contest, which under the contract calls for not more than forty rounds, has been selected. Rickard expects to stage the bout on July 4, but said to-night that he had not the slightest idea yet where he would finally erect his arena. He has until March 25 to announce the site and boxers must train for at least six weeks at the scene of the battle. The price of tickets will probably range from 25 to fifty dollars.

Under the present agreement the total amount of the purse for the two heavyweights reaches $127,500, which is the largest sum ever offered for a pugilistic encounter in any weight class. It exceeds by $6,500 the $121,000 record purse paid to Johnson and Jeffries.

No value can be fixed upon the moving picture rights at present. The syndicate of moving picture men who paid $150,000 for five-sixths of the Johnson-Jeffries rights, collected receipts of $576,000 on their venture.

"Any excitement to be found in this mossgrown, domedolested town," demanded the hypercritical young guest from the Big Burg.

"Plenty of it, Mr. Smart," replied the landlord of the Petunia Tavern. "If you just go out on the street and disparage our progressive little city in that tone of voice."

Mike Donlin, one-time star of the Glants and king of heavy hitting outfields in his day, has turned to pocketpicking for a living. With the same dexterity that they once spread flies and blasted the hopes of opposing batsmen, Mike's fingers are making him a good living abstracting coin from other people's pockets. But there's no danger of the smiling Michael running afoul of the law in his new line of endeavor. All of which is predatory of tidings that Donlin is appearing as "Slippery Mugs," the deft and amiable pickpocket in "Turn to the Right!" the comedy sketch which returns to Kansas City next week at the Grand.

For several years the former diamond favorite has been appearing before audiences in vaudeville and dramatic offerings and gaining experience for more ambitious undertakings in the realm of the footlights and great paint.
