Optometrist The word "Optometrist" comes from two Greek words meaning "eye" and "measure." Therefore, an Optometrist is literally an "eyemeasurer." The appropriateness of the name becomes apparent when one realizes that eye conditions with which Optometrists have to deal require measurements of the utmost exactness to determine whether or not defects are present and, if they are, the precise kind of lens grinding required to correct them. "Measuring" in this case means determining the exact curvature of each eye, the distance between its focal and linear length and the tension of both internal and external ocular muscles. Permanently located at 12 N. MARKET SQUARE Second Floor
