$3,226 DAMAGES FOR LOSS OF EYE

Heavy Award to Emerson-Brantingham Employee in Franklin County Court

Chambersburg, Pa., Feb. 17.—For the loss of his eye while at work in the foundry of the Emerson-Brantingham Company at Waynesboro, Cyrus B. Hies was awarded the sum of $3,226 in jury in common pleas court here. Hies was pouring hot lead in the Emerson-Brantingham Company shops on October 19, 1917, when the metal splattered out, some of it striking his left eye and causing injury which later necessitated the removal of that organ. Hies brought suit against his employer and the large verdict is the result of his suit.

ENGINEER DIES SUDDENLY

Waynesboro, Pa., Feb. 17.—Captain William Wallace, a veteran of the Civil War, and for many years employed here as an engineer on the Emerson-Brantingham Company's freight line, died suddenly of neuritis of the heart at his home here Friday night. He was in his seventy-fifth year. He was a survivor of the Twenty-first Pennsylvania Cavalry and served with distinction under Sheridan. For thirteen years he was in charge of the State railway mail service on the Cumberland Valley railroad.

TAKE AWAY TOOLS

Waynesboro, Pa., Feb. 17.—After six weeks out on strike because a couple men were discharged without due cause, as they thought, the ninety men employed in the Emerson-Brantingham foundry, proceeded in a body to the plant Saturday and carried away their tools. The delegation was headed by the foreman. This means a final severance of diplomatic relations between the men and the management.

"WONDER MEDICINE" FROM THE WEST COMES TO HARRISBURG

Nu Vim, The Iron Weed Tonic That Created Such a Sensation by Relieving the Sick and Run-Down—Soon to Be Demonstrated at Gorgas' Drug Store

"Out of the west," like young Lochinvar, has come a remedy with a wonderful but well-earned reputation. The sick, the ailing, the discouraged—thectic cripples—the weak, pale and poorly nourished—sufferers from stomach, kidney, liver and bowel disorders—have flocked to the western demonstrations of Nu Vim, listened to the testimony of their friends and fellow townsmen. Doubters have been convinced by the hundreds. They doubt no more, because they have seen in their own homes, on their own bodies, the proof that Nu Vim well deserves the name of "Wonder Medicine."

Nu Vim's introduction in Philadelphia, Camden, Wilmington and other eastern cities has been followed by seemingly impossible results, after all else had failed. Stories told by those who had suffered hopelessly for years before Nu Vim came, are well-nigh incredible. It will be a joyous day for the sick and suffering of Harrisburg when it is announced, "NU VIM IS HERE!"

CALLS 28TH BOYS "CRACK" DIVISION

Pennsylvanians Always in Thickest Fighting, Says Returned Pastor

Philadelphia, Feb. 17.—Pennsylvania's Twenty-eighth (Iron) Division became known as the "crack" division of the American army, according to the Rev. Robert P. Zebly, who has returned to his home, 5204 Chestnut street, after almost two years spent in Y. M. C. A. work abroad.

"Wherever the fighting was most furious and it seemed as if the Germans might have a chance to break through or stem the American offensive the men of the Iron Division were sent," he said. Mr. Zebly formerly was pastor of Grace Baptist Church, Camden. He was one of the fifty-seven "Y" workers on board the Oronsa when that ship was torpedoed.

"I was with the Twenty-eighth Division at Camp Hancock," he said, "and the wonderful drive at Chateau Thierry. The men went into action on the south side of the Marne and as long as the Americans held the sector.

"At La Channel, where Quentin Roosevelt was shot down, the ground changed hands eight times. The fighting was in the open, and there were no dugouts except holes just big enough for a man to get in. These were made by the boys about twenty-five or thirty yards apart as they climbed up the hill and finally held the ground. Eight Germans fell to every American. I was following along with the headquarters. Praises 107th Artillery

"I want to say a few words about the 107th Field Artillery. The First battalion went out across the river Vesle right in front and brought back prisoners, the only incident of the kind I believe of the war.

SENATORS MEAN TO SPEAK FREELY ON LEAGUE PLAN

Mean to Take Wilson at His Word and Take Open Stand

Washington, Feb. 17.—Before the end of the present week Republican leaders in the Senate intend to disregard the President's appeal to keep their mouths shut about his League of Nations plan until he reaches the United States and tries to convert the into his views. This statement is made on excellent authority.

Such powerful factors in the Senate as Senator Lodge, Massachusetts, and Knox, Pennsylvania, acknowledged diplomats and authorities on international affairs, scrupulously have refrained from precipitate comment on the constitution of the proposed league as called to this country. It is emphasized that this was by no means because of the President's desire for silence by the Senate until the President's arrival in Washington, but was because they and some other Senators desire to obtain a thorough understanding and grasp of everything that is proposed in the league's constitution and then speak their minds freely and forcibly on the floor of the Senate.

The Senate has given ample evidence that it is sick and tired of "pussyfooting" in arranging peace with the Central Powers. Having in mind the President's expressions in regard to open covenants of peace openly arrived at among Senators, the President is determined to take the President at his word and make their part of the negotiations frank and open.

Senators Oppose Surrender The stand of a great many Senators is that the Constitution divides equally the power of making treaties between the President and the Senate. The Senate does not propose to surrender one jot or little of this power, and believes the President is assuming in attempting to force assent on this or any other similar matter, just as much as the Senate would be presuming in attempting to dictate to the President in his nego-
