Captain Barton Writes of Soldiers in France

CAPT. THOMAS BARTON

Frederick Barton, of Second and Hamilton streets, has received a letter from his nephew, Captain Thomas Barton, of Virginia, of the Eighteenth division, Three Hundred and Seventeenth Infantry, U. S. A., in which he tells some interesting things about a soldier's life "over there." Writing from Savoy, France, he tells of his trip across from Camp Lee early last summer on the Monoglia with 4,400 troops. He tells of his experiences in the trenches and of an air raid and the worst of all bombing. His company was first at the front with the New Zealand division at Lapanung. He says: "It may seem strange, but they were the finest lot of men I have run into over here and I made some of the best friends I had among them. After moving from place to place the captain's company participated in the great drive of September 26, in reserve at first and then in full action. The artillery for that drive was literally hub to hub. At 11 o'clock that night suddenly every long range gun seemed to open up and it was beyond description all that night—the greatest barrage in history, lasting without a pause until 10 o'clock the next morning. My company came out of this drive remarkably well, not losing a man. Between November 1 and 5 the Eightieth division moved forward fifteen and five-eighths miles in a narrow line; it always led and captured two Hunns for every man wounded, captured one Hunn for every man wounded and one Hunn for every ten men wounded, besides large quantities of munitions and other stores."

Big Seaplane No. 3495, Three Reserve Ensigns and Machinists Missing

Washington—Loss of the big seaplane No. 3495, with three ensigns of the navy, reserve and two machinists at mate, off the Virginia coast, was officially announced today by the Navy Department. The machine started on a flight from Norfolk Sunday and failed to return. A radio operator reported that at 11 o'clock the plane was seen plunge into the water and disappear near Fisherman's Island. Search of the coast failed to disclose any trace of the plane and to-day it was officially given up as lost.

TO HAVE JURY TRIAL

The court in an opinion to-day in an action brought by Ira D. Lowery, administrator of the estate of D. D. Lowery, vs. J. H. Jr., and Alice Lowery, granted a rule to open a judgment and directed a jury trial. A dispute over the signatures of makers of a judgment note will be settled at the court trial, the court stating that it should be submitted to a jury.

SAYS HE'S NO FUGITIVE

Denying that he is guilty of charges of embezzlement as attorney at law, E. J. Bennett, colored and that he is not a fugitive from justice, J. R. Bennett, colored attorney, sent an answer to the disbarment proceedings against him by registered letter from Newark, N. J. In the answer Bennett states he will come back for trial and furnish bail. He claims the action should be taken in the disbarment until the criminal court case is disposed of.

POULTON-REED BETROTHAL TOLD

Sunday Luncheon Discloses That Miss Zulla Reed and Frank Poulton Will Wed

MISS ZULLA REED

Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Reed, of Carlisle, announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Zulla Reed, to Private Frank Poulton, son of J. A. Poulton, this city, at an informal luncheon at their home, Sunday. The table decorations were unusually attractive in pink and white and the great secret was discovered toward the close of the meal on tiny papers hidden in nutshells. The guests were from Hagerstown, Chambersburg, Harrisburg and Carlisle. Private Poulton is now located in Murbach, Germany, with the Ninetieth division of occupation. He enlisted in the Aviation division December, 1917, and was later transferred to the field artillery. The bride-elect is in the employ of the Western Union Telegraph Company. The date of the wedding is undetermined.

WAR WORKER SPEAKS
