"Well then" said Mr. Hershey, "come over here to our laboratory and I will introduce you to our Chemist, Mr. Zeigler. He can tell you how we test all the milk and cream that comes into our plant."

The Chemist was very much elated over the idea of showing the Ad man a number of very delicate tests which he was then making.

Said the Chemist, "We will start with these fine scales. They are so accurate and so extremely sensitive," he said, "that if you write your name on a piece of paper and you put another piece of paper of the same size and weight on one side of this scale you can tell the exact weight of the lead which is on the paper."

The Chemist explained how he had often written his own name on a piece of paper and by a number of tests on those scales determined that the amount of lead from a lead pencil, necessary to write his name, weighed about one ten thousandth of a gram.

That's getting it down pretty fine, isn't it?

Right here is where the Ad man's inquisitiveness got the best of him.

So he asked the Chemist, "What good was it to weigh things down to such minute quantities?"

You know a chemist is a very queer person in some respects. If he is a good chemist he is sincere and puts his whole heart into his work, and you can take it from the Ad man that Mr. Hershev wouldn't have him around unless he were a good chemist.

Then Mr. Hershey spoke up and said, "We maintain a standard of food value for every plate of ice cream that goes out of our plant." Said he, "We can tell just how many calories in each given quantity of cream."

"What in the world is a calorie?" asked the Ad

"Why, a calorie," explained Mr. Hershey, "is a unit of heat."

"Oh," exclaimed the Ad man, as though he had known it all the time.

Then the Chemist explained how he tested all the milk and cream to find out exactly how much butter fat and milk solids they contained.

"Why do you want to know so much about the butter fats and milk solids?" asked the Ad man. "Why don't you just go ahead when you get this milk and cream and mix it up with the rest of your ingredients and make the ice cream and get it over with?"

Mr. Hershey then explained, in a very emphatic manner, that HERSHEY'S SUPERIOR ICE CREAM is the finest grade possible to make and is chemically pure, and also it contains the proper amount of butter fat and milk solids.

Said he, "We make only one grade of ice creem, and that is why we put all this time and money and effort into this laboratory. We have the very latest instruments made, and the only chemical testing outfit like this in Harrisburg.

"It is the most accurate system in existence. It is far superior to the Babcock testing system used by most others."
