

$25,000,000 Saved For the Government

Washington, Mar. 12.—By the policy of placing disabled soldiers, sailors and marines for retraining in the existing institutions of the country, it is figured that the government has been saved over $25,000,000, which is a reasonable cost had all the men in training, and to be trained, be assembled in one or two institutions provided and controlled by the federal government. By using the existing educational institutions, representing an investment of over $300,000,000, there is available for the disabled man an infinitely greater opportunity than could possibly be given through any institution inaugurated especially for this work.

British Sailors Miss American Comrades

London, Mar. 12.—Officers and men of the Grand Fleet miss their comrades of the American battleship squadron which shared the war virgility of the British navy. The text just made public of the messages exchanged by the two forces when the American ships departed December 1, shows how strong was the friendship between them.

The Private Life of the Kaiser

FROM THE PAPERS AND DIARIES OF THE BARONESS VON LARISCH-REDDERN
The Kaiser and Kaiserin's Late Major Domestice, Chief of the Royal Household at Berlin and Potsdam.

Baroness von Larisch-Reddern is the TRUE name of the Berlin Court Lady who gave the story of the Kaiser to Henry William Fisher, Ursula, Countess von Eppinghoven being a nom de guerre, heretofore used to shield her.

[Continued from Yesterday.] Von Wittich reported the incident to the Emperor, and William, who was unwilling to lose the general, concluded that Liebenau needed some of his own medicine. So he sent for him.

"I will assume that your quarrelsomeness is the outcome of overwork and nervous excitement," he said, forestalling explanations; "you will leave this evening for a six weeks holiday." Then he turned on his heel, while the Court-marshal stood half dazed.

But six weeks do not last an eternity and at the end of his vacation Liebenau seemed to be as much of a favorite as ever. In fact, the Emperor appeared to welcome him back with much satisfaction. He returned from whose resemblance to his own self he had recoiled at a moment of anger.

And if Liebenau had not double-crossed the "Alte" himself, he might have continued to defy the Emperor and cudge the Court for a quarter of a century longer.

But he happened to do the Kaiser out of an ovation at the very moment when William craved and needed popular applause more than usual, and this is what happened to his tormentor.

"A word with you," said William looking his nastiest at the Court Marshal on his return from the trip, "this affair of Elbing (the place where William missed the 'hurrahs') has opened my eyes to your character and capabilities. I can't use a person who sets my people against God's anointment!"

ship between the head of the German Empire and the most notorious libertine in Europe.

Prince Bismarck used to say: "There have been some clever warriors among the Persians—Alcibiades, Caesar, Peter the Great, and many Turkish Sultans, whose names I forgot—but never a diplomat of distinction."

And both old Bismarck and Herbert made it their business to tell the Emperor repeatedly that Eulenburg was unfit company for him, stating their reasons in the plainest language.

To cap the climax, the elder Bismarck added: "One glance of Eulenburg is enough to spoil the most elaborate luncheon for me."

But, the Kaiser took no notice and continued to associate with this man and his infamous coterie: General Count Kuno Moltke, Count Johannes Lynar, who went to prison; Counts

Frits and William Hohenzollern, Friedrich Krupp, the cannon king, and others.

Kaiser's Mother Condemns Him
Opinion at Court and serious men generally, fully endorsed Prince Bismarck's drastic characterization and there were many who thought it applied to all the rest of His Majesty's intimates, including Huelsen, and the cloud of military chums, his adjutants, etc.

"It is a pity," said the Empress Frederick after Count Walderssee's retirement from Berlin, "that my son will have none but lightweight about him; all men of acumen are pushed aside. Still, I suppose I must not grumble so long as Count Herbert is kept out." Empress Frederick regarded Herbert Bismarck as the man who had instilled in the Emperor the liking for persons of his—Herbert's—stamp—flatterers, shallow and insolent, defamers of womankind, taphouse jesters and buttons. "Scratch either of the Kiderlen-Eulenburg-Huelsen crew and the pickle herring will appear," she was wont to say, and years ago nothing gave her greater satisfaction than the termination of William's friendship with the Austrian Crown Prince Rudolph, whom she abhorred as any decent woman might abhor a beast.

After all, men and women are judged by the company they keep. Admitted that the Kaiser had not a great number of peers to "choose from," Count Schulenburg, royal chamberlain, figured out that every tenth German noble was a moral leper—if William himself had been a clean, decent man, why did he select the most notorious and despicable members of the aristocracy for his companions?

There were the two Hohenzollerns, fugitives from justice; Count Kuno Moltke, ditto; Count Lynar, Prisoner No. 2213 at Liegburg Penitentiary; Count Edgar Wedell, banished from German soil; Major Von Nothmann, suicide when about to be taken into custody.

But admitting that Prussian noble are rotters, there were at least sixty nine millions of other Germans to choose from.

Correct. His Majesty did choose among them. And here are the names, etc., according to Criminal Court records: Sailor Trost, of the Hohenzollern; Recruit Bollhardt, of the Lanciers; Corporal Riedel, of the Lanciers; Gus Steinhauer, police sergeant; Private Kestler and other of that caliber.

Most of the last named crew are in jail, or were in jail when the war broke out.

Watch the Tongue of your Young! Your little Pets need Cascarets

Children think Cascarets just dandy, They are safe and mild cathartic candy. Sell for a dime—"work" every time.

MOTHERS! Clean the clogged-up places. Do away with the bile, sour fermentations and constipation poison which is keeping your little one cross, feverish and sick. Children love Cascarets, because to them it is like eating candy. Cascarets act better than castor oil, calomel or pills on the tender stomach, liver and bowels. Cascarets never gripe, never injure, and do not disappoint the worried mother. Give harmless Cascarets to children one year old and upwards. Each ten cent box contains full directions.

Doctor Tells How To Strengthen Eyesight 50 per cent In One Week's Time In Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home
Philadelphia, Pa. Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye strain or other eye weakness? If so, you will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to an active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Note: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent. in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use to almost every family." It is sold in Harrisburg by J. C. Kennedy, Croll Keller, J. Nelson Clark and other druggists.

William erected his own statue in Eulenburg's palace yard, conferred upon him the title of Prince and appointed him Member of the House of Lords and Privy Councillor.

A wing of Eulenburg's Castle, communicating with "Phil's" apartments, was set aside for William's own imperial use—in short, he showered him, up to the very day of the Harden exposures, with every favor in his power.

Eulenburg was Third Secretary of Legation in Munich when they first met at Castle Schlobitten, the seat of Count later Prince, Richard Dohna, who subsequently stigmatized the part he unwittingly played by this chance introduction as "the great folly of his life, never to be sufficiently atoned for."

Less than a month after the meeting at Schlobitten, the unknown diplomat's appointment as Minister to Oldenburg was gazetted and two years later—Eulenburg having in the meantime attended the Kaiser on his Northland trip—we find him Ambassador at royal courts, Stuttgart and Munich. In 1902 he was the Kaiser's representative in Vienna when not dancing attendance upon William in Berlin, at his hunting boxes or on his travels.

Eulenburg had little besides his salary to bless himself with during these years for Liebenberg bought with his wife's money, yielded no revenue to speak of.

Political Jobs for Bankrupts
Eulenburg was kept poor and made to believe by years of the Kaiser's flattering, but expensive visits. Like the typical Prussian official, he never had money of his own.

Add to this the expensive habits of Court life, and the terrible infliction of having to feed seven hungry youngsters ("so devoted a royalist would never think of having fewer children, or more, than William, it was said), and you get a vague notion of things as they were in the Eulenburg household.

The promotion to the Munich post, together with the excessive allowance for moving, helped Eulenburg momentarily; but until the appointment of Vienna he considered able funds into his pockets, he never breathed freely.

Royal Exchequer Keeps Wolf From Door
Eulenburg was in the very throes of financial despair, as everybody at Court knew. The Kaiser alone affected to be ignorant of his friend's trials, and never remarked "I like nothing better than spending a few days at Liebenberg; the only trouble is, the place is so terribly fashionable," words that were repeated to the Minister by the royal house officials and occasional guests over and over again.

So frequent and so annoying were the reticent glances of the Prince of Meiningen once said: "He will be driven to the Jew, if you keep on." "Keep on—what?" retorted the Emperor, angrily.

"Thieving is poverty up to him." "Do you see him anywhere about?" said the Kaiser sarcastically.

"No," replied the Princess Charlotte, "for a wonder, there is no Eulenburg present, but the gossips-in-ordinary are," and Her Royal Highness, raising one of her fair shoulders, gave a nod to General von Hahnke and von Plessen.

The Woman Pays
Eulenburg, however, did not go to the usurer, but selected the safe though—lovely—road—borrowed from a relative, his sister-in-law wife of Count Eulenburg, Major in the Guard Dragoons. This lady, blessed with a considerable fortune in her own right, allowed herself to be persuaded to provide not only funds for the building and furnishing of an imperial suite of rooms at Court Phil's seat, but in addition, lent her brother-in-law a snug sum, the interest of which was to be exclusively applied to the entertainment of His Majesty.

And this extraordinary display of ready devotion on the part of the Eulenburg family, His Majesty was not insensible; not only was Count Phil, who never in his life had distinguished himself as a diplomat, promoted beyond the dreams of hardened office-seekers, but gratuitously led William to unwonted extravagance.

To improve the outlook from the imperial suite of rooms at Liebenberg, he presented his host with a stone fountain "to be erected in the farmyard opposite the Kaiser's windows, levied to His Excellency the cost of setting up and finding water. Countess Eulenburg, she of the loose purse, who was good at figures, brooked the expense of rearing the ornament exceeded by far the sculptor's and stonemason's bills.
