FIRE DESTROYS 'RED HEN' JOINT

Resort Where Liquor Has Been Illegally Sold For Years Is Burned

Waynesboro, Pa., March 13.—By the destruction by fire early Tuesday morning of the "Red Hen," a joint in the vicinity of Pen Mar Park, where liquor of a doubtful character was disposed of for many years, it removes from the sections the last vestige of an enterprise of this sort. The "Red Hen," as it was called and familiarly known, had been the scene of much debauchery, and was for several years an eye-sore to many persons living in the vicinity or visiting the famous Blue Ridge resort. The building was erected several years ago by the late Benjamin Shockey. It was the last of the grog shops to close, however, and its destruction by fire was the fate of all the other hotels and liquor stores at Highfield, Blue Mountain and near the Cascades. All of these large buildings, with a barroom attached, were burned to the ground by incendiaries or otherwise.

The "Red Hen" did a thriving business with those visiting Pen Mar from Virginia, West Virginia and parts of Maryland that were dry, and often these imbibers of liquor gotten there, drifted into the park under its influence and caused considerable annoyance to those gathering at the resort for pleasure. It got so bad that it was deemed necessary by the court at Hagerstown to refuse to grant a license to the place.

Ministers Do Their Best in New Role of Soloists

A smile swept the audience at Market Square Presbyterian church last night when Harry P. Armstrong, chorister, made Dr. W. W. Orr, the preacher, and the pastor of the church, sing one of the choruses alone. Neither of these men claim to be star singers, but they did the best they knew. That helped some. This is just an instance; but if any person had looked on in the fifty or sixty Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts, he was drilling in singing yesterday afternoon, he would have known that this man gets people to sing. These young people meet again this afternoon at 5 o'clock. They will be in evidence in the meetings soon. Dr. Orr is winning new friends, and increasing audiences every service. Last night's audience was much larger. Yesterday afternoon the audience grew greatly over the previous one. This afternoon he will speak at 3 o'clock on the subject, "The Worst Sin in This Church." To-night at 7:30 o'clock he will preach again.

J. Clyde Myton under whose guidance the Motor Club of Harrisburg has grown, has been nominated for another term as secretary-treasurer of the organization.

"Now, Mr. Hershey, not to interrupt you," began the Ad man, "but I would like to have you tell me more about the making of HERSHEY'S SUPERIOR ICE CREAM."

"You know when we left off we were at the holding vat."

"After the mixture has been well agitated and cooled in the holding vat what do you do with it?"

Mr. Hershey got up from his desk and asked the Ad man to step into the big main room of the plant. When the two men came to the holding vat, Mr. Hershey asked, "Do you see these stationary pipes and valves? The mixture goes through these pipes and valves down stairs to the freezers."

"The mixture is frozen by means of an artificial freezing process, and no ice or salt or any other outside freezing agent is used."

The Ad man stopped him here, saying, "You did not tell me anything about when you put the flavor in the mixture."

"Well we are coming to that directly," replied Mr. Hershey, "let us go down stairs to the freezing room and I will show you."

Mr. Hershey then pointed out how the flavor was added to the mixture right at the freezer before freezing process began.

"How long does it take to freeze the ice cream?" asked the Ad man.

"Not very long," replied Mr. Hershey, "about eight minutes are sufficient. Then after it is frozen, the ice cream goes directly from the freezer into these large cans."

"You see we freeze the cream right in sight of the public. People passing on the street can look right into our freezing room."

"When the can is full it is covered with sanitary waxed paper, and from the freezing room is sent to the hardening room then packed in ice to be shipped."
