The Commission some time ago ruled that it had jurisdiction and directed that the case proceed. Willis F. McCook, of Pittsburgh, appeared to make the argument. The complaints of the city of New Castle and various bodies against the rates and service arrangements of the water company in that city were argued by James A. Gardner, city solicitor, and Harry A. Gregory. Decisions were received. Both cases involve important questions.

The word has come here that at least fifty contracting firms have been looking up the plans and specifications and that many have determined to submit bids. The Board will meet next week to make the awards. The bids for the Reading and Tyrone armories will be opened the day after the cavalry tenders are received. The plan is to spend over $200,000 on the Philadelphia armory which will be one of the largest to be built by the State.

After the Dogs.—State Live Stock Sanitary authorities are making inquiries as to the manner in which central Pennsylvania counties enforced the dog license law during 1918 and it is intimated that some tart letters will be sent to county commissioners of the districts where the officials failed to act vigorously. The Board is to take over the dog enforcement under the reorganization act.
