New Improvement in Radio Discovered by Engineers

Schnectady, N. Y.—Photographic receiving and recording of wireless messages are being carried on by naval engineers at the Ottercliffs receiving station near Bar Harbor. Me. They use an instrument invented by C. A. Hoxle, an engineer employed at the General Electric Company here. This invention permits the eye either to supplement or replace the ear in reading wireless messages. A totally deaf person could be a wireless operator in a station so equipped.

Other results are greater speed in receiving, greater accuracy in decimbers, where and recording to the control of t

Other results are greater speed in receiving, greater accuracy in deciphering and a permanent record of every dot and dash in every message so received. Because of the very delicate tuning that can be obtained and the resulting high degree of "selectivity." It has been found practicable to receive messages despite many inductive noises and interfering signals which ordinarily have rendered receiving impossible.

Although the instrument is not immune from the effects of static "strays," it has successfully recorded messages at high speed regardless of strange static interference that without its aid would have baffled the receiving operator.

It is said that messages have been deciphered with its assistance when operators were unable to get word of it by ear.

Mr. Hoxie in discussing the in-

of it by ear.
