

OUR BOXING TITLE HOLDERS ARE ALL BORN AMERICANS; READING WINS RUNNER-UP CUP

Boxing Title Holders in This Country Are All Native Sons

With the amazing revival of boxing, illustrated here by three individual activities, and of wrestling which is being staged in the very highest class manner, there comes a flood of inquiries regarding who is champion, and unfortunately the wrestling game has not been standardized completely enough to identify this one and that. By his victory over Ed "Strangler" Lewis at New York recently, the Pole, Zbyszko, brother of the famous Stainlaws, may be taken as premier for the minute, but his title is disputed.

French and Australian title holders in the light heavyweight class, but no meeting ever has taken place. The only foreign world's champion is Jimmy Wilde, and the flyweight class is one in which American boxers never have specialized.

Yankees Hold World's Title It is also an interesting fact that native Americans hold world's titles in five of the seven classes. Willard, O'Dowd, Britton, Leonard and Herman are champions of the world.

The dethronement of Kid Lewis as welter champion marks the elimination of the only foreign-born champion boxer America has had in some years past. Lewis is a native of London and has held titles in two countries, the featherweight in England and the welter in the United States.
