TAFT IS HAILED AS OCCUPANT OF WHITE HOUSE SECOND TIME

Former President Cheered by Notable Gathering of Publicity Men at Golden Jubilee Dinner in Bellevue-Stratford, Philadelphia; Travels Far to Be Present

Philadelphia, April 5.—Former President William H. Taft was hailed as the "100th anniversary occupant of the White House" at the golden jubilee dinner accorded by N. W. Ayer and Son at the Bellevue-Stratford last night. There were present about 100 representatives of leading manufacturing, industrial and business establishments as well as double that number of publishers, editors, photographers and advertising men and also nearly 400 employees of the firm in this city. New York, Boston, Cleveland, Chicago and the former president had traveled several hundred miles to be present and respond to a toast. Taft was greeted with the warmest enthusiasm when he entered the ballroom, where the banquet was held. He came in when the dinner had been served. About seven or eight hundred present arose and cheered him as he puffed his pipe and went in and out among the guests. When Mr. Ayer introduced him in a jocular way as a man who once occupied the White House one term and the other the other term, another, the audience as with one voice shouted: "He is," and repeated the words several times for emphasis. Mr. Taft dwelt forcefully and eloquently upon the value of free speech and a free press in the maintenance of a popular government and said in a government run by force and despotism the first thing the ruling power does is to abolish free speech and free press. "That's what they're now doing in Russia," he said, "and is a fair indication of what Bolshevism is." Mr. Taft said that public opinion is the greatest agency in the solution of questions that do not come within the scope of positive law; such as disputes between nations over international matters, and in making good use of their obligations of citizenship who otherwise might not do so. There are instances, he said, when publicity is not wise. The deliberations of the committee that drafted the constitution of the United States were secret, and justly so, Mr. Taft said; also the deliberations of the committee which framed the Canadian constitution, and he believed the same for open proceedings of the Peace Conference in Paris had come from newspaper correspondents who had not fully judged of the difficulties in the way of such a course. As a member of the National War Labor Board, he said, he saw the wisdom of holding closed sessions of such bodies so that the members of opposing interests might have a chance to speak their minds freely toward one another without fear of having their words misconstrued or misunderstood if portions of what they had to say or even all of it were published. Mr. Taft expressed regret that he lacked the genius and vision possessed by Mr. Ayer in the psychology of advertising. If he had, he said, it might have been different with him in 1912.

A WARNING

Both the operators and miners are suffering great inconvenience as the result of the indifference of the coal-buying public.

The coal market is not active. With nobody buying, the operators cannot work their mines — and the miners cannot work for the same reason.

Withholding your coal order is not going to profit the consumer a penny — on the contrary it is developing a condition that may bring a repetition of the serious coal famine of the Winter of 1917-1918.

A fuel famine is not an impossibility — and prices would mount still higher. Common sense dictates the need of buying coal now.
