"I know an old darkey who got religion last month and decided to join the church. He selected, of course, the richest and handsomest church in town, the church with the finest music and the best preaching. Then he called on the pastor and stated his design."

"Did the pastor hemmed and hawed. He felt that his fashionable flock wouldn't welcome such an addition as the old darkey. He didn't want to hurt the old fellow's feelings, however, and finally he said: 'Go home, Uncle Rooster. Go home and pray over it. This is an important matter, and it should be made a subject of prayer.'

"Old Uncle Rooster went home and in a few days he was back again. 'Well,' said the divine. 'Well, what's the verdict now?'"

"Ah, prayed and Ah prayed," said Uncle Rooster, "and de good Lawd he say to me, 'Rooster, mah son, Ah wouldn't bothah mah haid about dat mattah no mo. Ah've been trying to git into dat chuch mahself fo' de last 25 years an' ah ain't had no luck, nuther.'"—Exchange.

After Your Baby Is Born - Think Now About the Time to Come Afterwards.

When you hold in your arms your tiny new infant, be sure that you can feel that before its arrival you did all in your power to give it a happy and healthy future.

Scientists say that the thoughts and feelings of the expectant mother greatly affect the health and disposition of the future infant.

For over half a century thousands of women who have used the time-honored remedy, Mother's Friend, say that they entirely escaped nausea, vomiting and that peculiar distressing feeling so usual where nature is unaided. They thus preserved a wonderfully bright and happy disposition which reflects so markedly upon the unborn child.

The regular use of Mother's Friend the muscles are made and kept soft and elastic so readily to nature's demand for expansion without the usual wrenching strain. The nerves are not drawn upon, and as a consequence the expectant mother is calm and serene and the nights are not disturbed with nervous twitchings, and the crisis is one of joy and happiness.

Write the Bradford Regulator Company, Dept. K, Lamar Building, Atlanta, Georgia, for their Motherhood Book, of value to every woman, and get a bottle of Mother's Friend from your druggist, and begin a treatment that will bring real relief.

COPENHAGEN SEEKS TO CONTROL BALTIC TRADE

The Old "Merchants' Haven" Aspires Again to Be the Commercial Leader of North Europe, Now That Hamburg Has Been Crippled by the War

The Vikings, scudding about in their little sailing ships to plunder pretty well controlled commerce a dozen centuries ago. In the course of their scuddings they founded on the north coast of the Island of Sjælland, where Nature had provided a protected harbor, a town which they called Kobenhavn, or "merchants' haven," and which is now known to the world as Copenhagen, capital of Denmark.

The merchandising at this haven consisted largely in those days of receiving stolen treasures from the big blond raiders and providing the sea rovers in return with mead for their drinking horns. The traders flourished and eventually began to find some outlet beyond their own country for their increasing stocks, and thus Copenhagen grew to commercial importance, so much so, in fact, that it became one of the influential members of the Hanseatic League and a rival of Hamburg, Bremen, Lubeck and the German North Sea and Baltic ports.

In the Thirty Years' War Germany was torn and plundered and Copenhagen took a spurt ahead of its German rivals. King Christian IV, recognizing Denmark's opportunity, promoted trade. In 1620 he built on one of the waterways which cut into the city a house, and that striking, many gabled structure, still is used as a stock exchange. It is of red tapestry brick and is surmounted by a spire formed by the twisting together, ropelike, of the bodies of four great copper dragons. This spire, green with the verdigris of centuries, may be seen on clear days far out over the Oresund, that separates Denmark from Sweden.

But in later days the Danish traders lost some of the aggressiveness of Eric the Red and of old Christian, while the North Germans became more and more the merchants of the Baltic and the North Sea. Then came the theft by the Prussians of Schleswig-Holstein and later the digging of the Kiel Canal. Copenhagen became an easy going city of a glorious past, while the ships from the seven seas anchored at Hamburg or Bremen.

The world war, however, gave Copenhagen another opportunity, and now the old "Merchants' Haven" hopes again to take mercantile sea honors from the castle banner of Hamburg. Regarding Copenhagen's aspirations, Albert E. Haase, writing in the New York Times, says:

The war made Copenhagen a clearing house for Europe. As the capital of one of the most important neutral European countries it became a political center of great significance. Changed conditions brought prosperity, and a new class of businessmen assumed control. The financier supplanted the producer.

Denmark's financial system was, even before the war, sound. Her methods for mobilizing her credits had long been accepted by the financial world. Old banks expanded, and new banks came into existence. It is reported that deposits grew to almost four times their prewar amount. Insurance records of old Denmark were shattered in a manner that never had been thought possible; for Copenhagen became the place in which American and European insurance companies placed their reinsurance, a business which had once gone to the Central Powers.

On the heels of this increased financial power came a positive assertion of initiative on the part of the Danish businessman. World-wide trading organizations came into being, and Copenhagen became the home of these organizations, the branches of which were chiefly in the countries at war with Germany. Among these organizations is the Trans-Atlantic Company, which was started in 1916, to compile information regarding foreign trade and to invest capital in firms engaged in foreign trade.

This organization has, so far, succeeded in associating itself with seventeen importing and exporting companies. Another important organization is the General Commercial Company, Ltd., started in 1917, which differs from the Trans-Atlantic Company only in that it is concerned chiefly with Russia and South America.

Though increased financial power and brings the roses to children's cheeks. Only costs few cents—make it yourself same as ordinary tea. Ask Grandma about Dr. Carter's K & B Tea and she will tell you that it is a spring cleaner and tonic in her younger days because it was justly famous as a really efficient herbal remedy.

To drive out of the system the accumulated impurities of the winter is good advice, and people who want better blood and keener enjoyment of life should not neglect taking at least a two weeks' treatment of gentle health-building K & B Tea.

Druggists will tell you that scores of people enjoy a cup at bedtime because it keeps liver and bowels in proper condition and ends bilious attacks and sick headache. Give it to the children; they like it, and it acts very gently on their little bowels. Be sure you get Dr. Carter's K & B Tea.

strong commercial organizations, free from German influence are sources of strong assurance to the Danish trader, yet the free port has been the foundation of the confidence upon which they have placed their hopes. Their confidence in Copenhagen's free port has not been lessened by the constant warnings that Sweden and Norway will not stand with folded arms while Denmark attempts to gain supremacy in the Baltic trade. Again and again the warning is made that Malmo and Gothenburg in Sweden, and Bergen and Christiania in Norway, are planning free harbors. The Dane knows that more cities of Scandinavia will be needed to handle the enormous resulting traffic, yet he is well aware of the fact that the geographical position of either Malmo or Gothenburg is not as favorable as that of Copenhagen. Norway's claims do not loom large, for Bergen and Christiania are not placed in the same category with Gothenburg or Malmo.

The port of Copenhagen has been free for more than twenty-five years. For a period of years it was not improved, but during the war changes have been made and a real development has taken place. It has been estimated that more than 10 million dollars have been spent thus. Its tonnage capacity, reported to be 1,600,000, has been pronounced as inadequate for the traffic which Copenhagen may expect. This condition, however, may be easily overcome, since the free port, being north of the city, is at a point where it may be enlarged to twice its present capacity.

The free port is a semi-official institution, and is in close connection with the Danish customs department. In fact, it is an agency of that department. Like all other free ports, it offers certain advantages to the foreign manufacturer. Goods may be stored in its buildings free of duty for any length of time. Thus the privilege is afforded to the Baltic distributor of having a convenient storehouse for his goods, which may accumulate during a slack season. When the demand becomes heavy, the Baltic trader is in a position to meet the wants of his customers immediately. The cargoes of ocean-going vessels may be unloaded at Copenhagen and distributed in the Baltic regions by the smaller steamers which call at the less important Baltic ports. These steamers would return to Copenhagen with the exports of the Baltic regions, which would form the return cargo of the ocean-going vessels. The convenience which the Copenhagen free port affords the foreign manufacturer is not confined to the Baltic territory alone; for Copenhagen may well take Hamburg's place for all Europe. As Hamburg was at one time so Copenhagen is now a terminus for many ships calling at all ports of the world, and chiefly European ports. Hence it offers the same service that Hamburg did in former years, that is, quick and cheap transshipment of goods, when the demand is heavy, to all important European ports.
