ice was held at the Covenant Presbyterian church, where she was long a member, at 10 o'clock, conducted by the pastor, the Rev. Harvey A. Klaer. The pallbearers were members of the session of the church including S. H. Garland, W. F. Schreadley, D. A. Teats, D. A. Kaufman, George R. Pritchard and J. B. Livingston. Interment was made in the family plot at McVeystown. Of the letters of sympathy sent by friends to the family following Mrs. Stackpole's death the following tribute was especially appreciated. It came from a friend in McVeystown: "I always regarded her as one specially sent or commissioned to proclaim the gospel of sunshine and cheer." The Rev. Mr. Klaer, Mrs. Stackpole's pastor, in his sermon brought messages from many of Mrs. Stackpole's friends and neighbors who had known her for many years and from members of the congregation with whom she had been associated.

What Science Can Offer Milady From a scientific work, The Sense of Sight, by Prof. Frank N. Spindler, we quote the following: If the brunette is of a rather pale or grayish complexion she could wear green to advantage, as that will tend to make the face appear more rosy. This is seen in the charming effects of a green parasol in such cases. She should, however, avoid red or blue, for, according to the contrast effects noted above, red clothing, hat and parasol will make the face appear greenish, and blue will give it a yellowish tinge. The golden haired, rosy cheeked blonde can wear white, although it will somewhat dull the brilliancy and brightness of the hair and face. Black will accentuate her complexion, since it will tend to give it a yellowish tinge, and yellow and red are discordant. What does it mean to a woman who is selecting apparel to have the benefit of the advice of salespeople who are familiar with these principles? NOTE:—THIS STORE CLOSSES SATURDAYS AT 6 O'CLOCK.
