"When a Girl Marries"

By ANN LISLE

A New, Romantic Serial Dealing With the Absorbing Problems of a Girl Wife

"My, but I'm sleepy," yawned Phoebe, as she followed me into the bedroom on our return from the strange evening to which she had created me. "I could sleep till noon. I hope you aren't an early riser, like I was. Breakfast at eight-thirty at home and every one has to be there."

"We won't get up—till we wake up," I laughed. "I'm pretty tired myself, and I promise to let you sleep as long as you like," said Phoebe casually and indifferently.

"This is nice of you, Anne," said Phoebe, coolly, as she finished her grapefruit and advanced to her coffee and toast. "But where's your breakfast?"

"I couldn't take anything except black coffee and my toast," I replied. "That Chinese chicken was a bit too much for me. Doesn't it bother you?"

"Oh, I'm used to it," replied Phoebe calmly.

"You go to Chang Fuy's a lot don't you, dear?" I began with restraint and then at last, flinging diplomacy to the winds, I let my heart speak. "Oh, Phoebe, Phoebe, dear, I don't like it! And I don't like Evvy or Mr. West or Sheldon either. I wish, wish, wish that you wouldn't see so much of them."

Phoebe stared at me with candid distaste for a moment.

"They're my friends," she reminded me.

"Not the right friends—not good enough for you," I protested. "I saw that for myself last night dear. You're too sweet, too fine for them."

"Did you go along to spy?"

Phoebe's voice took on a sneering quality not unlike that of Jim's when he resented my interference with his viewpoints. She put back the tray and got to the door, slipping into the robe and sandals I had given her. Then she faced me with a curt little air of dignity.

"I didn't want to go particularly," I replied. "I did want to talk to you, though. And when you planned to save me a lonely evening, I couldn't refuse for fear of hurting you."

"No? Well, you're a little late in your fears of hurting me, Anne. And you're a little late in your interference in my affairs. Once I would have welcomed it. When Jim married you I thought I'd found a sister. I thought you'd just naturally feel like a sister. A fine sister!"

"Oh, Phoebe, dear, I know that I failed you often. But it was because I was afraid of Virginia, and didn't dare interfere. Now you need me!"

"Now I have friends of my own and don't need you."

"Oh, Phoebe, you do! They're the wrong friends."

I had crossed over to the bureau and found myself with the jade earrings Dick West had given Phoebe in one hand and in the other the lip-stick Evvy had taught her to use.

"They teach you things and give you things," I began.

Phoebe swept over and caught her possession out of my hand.

"They're my friends. I was lonesome till I found them. Give me my presents, Anne Harrison. Once I had a gift—and it was taken from me. Now I keep what's mine. You didn't try to help me then. I don't want your interference now. I won't have it."

"Oh, Phoebe, you've changed!" I cried.

"Yes, I've changed. And you can't

CAMP DIX PAYS TRIBUTE TO DEAD

Camp Dix, Wrightstone, N. J., April 12.—In the greatest tribute yet paid by Americans to their soldier dead, Camp Dix conducted the honors of its parade grounds, boulevards and avenues to the 5,000 men from Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York and Delaware, who, originally trained at this post, laid down their lives in the service of their country. The event was given national significance when as a tribute from enlisted men of all states now serving in the Pennsylvania war hero planted a spruce at headquarters in honor of ex-President Theodore Roosevelt, while Major-General Scott, commander of the camp, set out an evergreen at the entrance of the reservation in memory of President Wilson, the late Lieutenant-Colonel David Hunter Scott, assistant chief of staff of the Twenty-third Division, Pennsylvania. Delegations from many cities of the four states, Federal representatives, and representatives of the National Dead attended the ceremonies, planned by General Secretary Frank Wardle, of the Knights of Columbus, and promoted by that organization as a part of the permanent camp beautification campaign. Among the memorial trees are two for former secretaries of the Knights of Columbus and the Y. M. C. A.

OVERCOME BY GAS

Norman E. Imboden, grocer of 347 Munich street, was taken to the Harrisburg Hospital last evening, overcome by illuminating gas. He will recover hospital attaches said today.

Register Mothers and Wives of Soldiers Who Want to See Big Review

Wives and mothers of members of the 28th Division are urged by Mayor Keister to send their names and addresses to his office so that reservations can be made for them on the Yankee special, the train which will take them to Philadelphia, free of charge to view the parade of the units of the Keystone organization.

A bureau has been established at the Mayor's office at which the relatives of Harrisburg soldiers now overseas can have reservations made on the Yankee special. The train has been made possible by the Kiwanis Club, that organization volunteering to pay the expenses of one special chartered car for the trip.

When complete arrangements have been made each woman who registers will be notified from the Mayor's office of the time the train will leave. The registration will be necessary, Mayor Keister said, so that the committee in charge can determine how many cars must be provided.

J. G. Guenther, executive manager of the Philadelphia Council of National Defense, suggested the opening of the bureau because the committee of arrangements in Philadelphia will provide a special grandstand to be used by guests of the city to view the parade. It is planned to have every man who was a member of the division in line and overseas veterans who have been referred to other units have been invited to march. Mayor Keister urging them to send their names and organization identification to the registration bureau.

Oklahoma Asks About Road Law

The State Highway Department was to-day asked by Governor Robertson, of Oklahoma, to furnish a statement of the Pennsylvania road building program for use in that state during a campaign for a $50,000,000 bond issue for improvement of highways. The request is for data on the construction, maintenance and cost of the roads.

The awards of contracts under bids received yesterday will probably be announced in the near future, but the middle of next week.

No Time For the "Stay-at-Homes"

In discussing his plans for the future, Colonel Edward Martin, recently appointed State health commissioner of Pennsylvania, said last night in Philadelphia.

"There are 3,300 physicians employed in my department but have no use for any man who did not help bear the burden of the war. The man who sat and fattened while his friends and colleagues worked and served will find no bearing in my branch of the government where I hold any authority."

Colonel Martin spoke at a dinner given in his honor and that of Lieutenant John D. McClure by the Philadelphia Clinical Association and other medical organizations.

Building Associations Limited as to Shares

Building and loan associations doing business in Pennsylvania may not issue triple and quadruple shares, which payments were made at the rate of $2 and $4 instead of $1, under a decision rendered to-day by John W. Morrison, deputy banking commissioner, by William M. Hargrett, deputy attorney-general. The decision says that periodical payments can not be provided for at a rate greater than $2 a share and that therefore "it would be illegal to require installments of $2 or $4 in order to retire shares in a much shorter time than would be possible if the periodical payments did not exceed $2."

In another opinion it is held that a banking corporation cannot be relieved of paying fees provided by law even though no examination was made of the company during 1917 or any other year.

Cardinal Is Left $2,000,000 to Build New Cathedral

Baltimore, April 12.—The will of Thomas O'Neill, dry goods merchant, who was probated yesterday, made provisions for $2,000,000 to Cardinal Gibbons for a new cathedral, $1,000,000 for a hospital, $300,000 to the associated professors of Loyola College for a new home, an annuity of $25,000 to his widow, and $250,000 to his widow.

The will also provided for the incorporation of O'Neill & Co., of which employees are to be stockholders, and many bequests to old employees and charities.

LOIS C. BEISEL

Lois Clendennin Beisel, the infant daughter of Mrs. Stella Beisel, died at the home of her uncle, 41 North Sixteenth street. Funeral services were held this afternoon and burial was made in St. John's cemetery, near Shiremanstown.

McFarland Heads C. of C. Committee on Housing; Work Will Be Pushed

J. Horace McFarland, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Housing Committee, was yesterday afternoon elected chairman of the Board of Directors of the Homes Registration Service, an organization established here by the United States Housing Corporation, to cooperate with the Chamber of Commerce Committee in meeting the local housing situation. Francis J. Hall was elected vice-chairman and Warren R. Jackson, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, secretary of the organization.

At yesterday afternoon's meeting Walworth Cady, special field agent of the housing corporation, outlined the multi-fold advantages derived from the establishment of the bureau. This bureau will be formed as soon as the registration of the city is completed by the Civic Club, which organization will start its work on Monday. Its work will be supervised by the Board of Directors.

The complete list of members of this board is as follows: J. Horace McFarland, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce Housing Committee; William Jennings, chairman of the Council of National Defense and War Camp Community Services; Edward Bailey, Chamber of Commerce Housing Committee; John Mollitor, chief of the State Bureau of Housing; Mrs. John W. Kelly, president of the Y. W. C. A.; Robert B. Reeves, general secretary, Y. M. C. A.; Mrs. William Henderson, Mrs. Marlin E. Olmsted and Miss Anne McCormick Harrisburg Civic Club; Mrs. Lyman D. Gilbert, president of the Harrisburg Chapter of the Red Cross; Mrs. M. Mosey, Lodge No. 705, Brotherhood Locomotive Engineers, representing organized labor; E. R. Eckenrode, representing the Knights of Columbus; Frank J. Brady, president of the Associated Aid Societies; Warren R. Jackson, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce; J. E. Gipple, president of the Harrisburg Real Estate Board; Francis J. Hall, representing manufacturers and Miss Mary V. Miller, superintendent of the Visiting Nurses Association.

Machine Leaders Scheme to Control

Leaders of the Palmer-McCormick faction of the State democracy met yesterday in Philadelphia for an interchange of opinion as to their chances of keeping control of the machine in the next four years. The meeting was ostensibly a gathering of the Democratic State executive committee, but it was in reality to outline plans for the presidential delegate elections.

A good bit of fuss was made about helping the Victory Loan, but the real idea was to pick men to go out and line up the Democrats and to get an information system on the activities of the Bonniwell contingent.

First of Series of Banquets For Returned Soldiers to Be Given

At a meeting of the committee of arrangements of the Men's League of the Market Square Presbyterian Church held last night plans were laid for the first of a series of banquets for returned soldiers, sailors and marines. This banquet will be given April 24. The committee expects that 150 or more people will be present, including approximately 30 or 35 of the returned service men.

A special program of music, speeches and a general good time is being arranged.

CENTRAL HIGH NOTES

Senior Class Meets
The Senior class held its first meeting under its new officers at the close of the afternoon session yesterday. The meeting was in charge of the newly-elected president, Robert W. Crist, and secretary, Miss Grace Peake. The first item of business was the reading of the standing committee. William Kay, an alumnus of the school, was present at the meeting, and made an urgent plea for the Seniors to attend the Central banquet at which time an alumni association will be formed, or, rather, the old alumni association will be re-organized. The meeting was then turned over to the Argus Observation and Editorial departments. The ballots, on which the senior statistics were also turned into the editor-in-chief at this time. The president made an appeal for persons to write a class song and a class history, and several members of the class announced that they had already been working on these the meeting adjourned at 5:50 o'clock.

H. A. Strawbridge
The H. A. Society will hold its annual straw-ride on Monday night. The society and its friends will motor to Grantville, where a supper will be served.

Choir Busy
The afternoon session choir is working hard in preparation for the Lamerton Oratorical Contest. Under the supervision of Professor Edward G. Jose, the choir has been practicing every Friday for the past several weeks, and has reached a high state of efficiency. Its participation in this contest will be the first this year, and the student body is looking forward eagerly to the part it will take in the program.

NEW POLICEMAN

William T. White, of Marysville, was to-day named as a State Capitol policeman.

CHURCHMEN PROTEST

Members of the St. Mary's Catholic Church, Lykens, at a recent meeting authorized a committee to write to the county commissioners advocating a fair assessment of the Susquehanna Collieries company coal lands, so that the corporation will not be compelled to close its mines.
