

KEYSTONE MEN DEPICTED GOING INTO ACTION

War Department Has Secured Official Pictures of 28th Division SERIES OPEN TO PUBLIC Publication of Fighting Scenes Is Begun by the Telegraph

Through the courtesy of Colonel J. B. Kemper, of the local Army recruiting station, the Telegraph begins to-day the publication of a series of photographs depicting the activities of the Twenty-eighth Division in the thick of the fighting during the last days of the war.

The photographs, while illustrative of modes of fighting which will be of interest to all readers, are of peculiar interest to the people of central Pennsylvania, since they show boys from this section, stationed on the firing line, taking an active part in the final drive which resulted in victory for the Allied forces.

The first of this series of photographs is presented in to-day's issue of this paper. It depicts American troops of the Twenty-eighth Division entering a town shortly after the evacuation of the Germans.

It is believed that there will be many boys from this section recognized by their friends.

The photographs have been compiled by the Historical Section, Historical Branch, War Plans Division, of the General Staff, War Department.
