

OBJECT TO ARMY UNIFORM COLLAR

Officers Back From France Condemn It as Unhealthy and a Nuisance

Camp Dix, N. J.—The high military collar of the American Army uniform is doomed, in the opinion of returning overseas officers at this camp, among whom inquiry shows condemnation of the chin supporting device to be practically unanimous.

Opinion favors the adoption of the open lapel collar blouse, similar to that now worn by the British soldiers and adopted in this country for army welfare workers. Tradition may keep the present sweatband effect in vogue for a few years, but the very fact that the men now advocating its elimination in favor of a more comfortable and sensible style will be the future leaders in War Department procedures assures its ultimate passing.

The adoption of the lapel blouse was advocated by many prominent Regular Army officers at the beginning of the war, but the sentiment was not sufficiently concentrated to bring about a reform. In this the navy got ahead of the army, for navy officers indicated a unanimous desire for a more comfortable style and an open minded Navy Department, sensing the value of the idea, endorsed the proposed change.

"Every officer and soldier who passed through the hot days of fighting last summer in France would have given a month's salary for a blouse that did not become a sweat-box in every charge," says a major of a division that was in the fighting from Chateau Thierry to Belgium. "Of course the men usually ripped open the neck of their blouse or threw it aside altogether in fighting on hot days. The present blouse affords no opportunity for ventilation and is unhealthy as well as uncomfortable in summer. The boys also found that there was a certain restriction of movement with the collar hooked up closely under the chin that deprived a man of just so much matter in quickness in his defensive and offensive movements.

"From what I have seen in my own experience and have learned from fellow officers I am convinced that a soldier tires more quickly in the high, tight collared blouse than he would in lapel collared effect offering free ventilation and unrestricted movement at the neck. Ex-soldiers are going to take back into civil life some practical ideas in comfort of attire; the army, on the other hand, is likely to modify its uniform with the sensible ideas of civilian clothing."

A general movement among army officers looking to the reform in uniforms as above suggested is predicted by other officers as certain to occur as soon as the demobilization work is completed and reconstruction of the new Regular Army is begun. The elimination in favor of a more comfortable and sensible style will be the future leaders in War Department procedures assures its ultimate passing.

BIG AIR PORT READY FOR AMERICAN FLIERS

Atlantic City Has First Station of Its Kind Ever Established—Conducted as Regular Seaport

The first "air port" ever established will be constructed at Atlantic City, N. J., in connection with the second Pan American Aeronautical Exposition and Convention, to be held there next month, according to plans just announced by the Aerial League of America through its Secretary, Augustus Post.

In a statement discussing the needs which the establishment of such an "air port" would fill, Mr. Post declared that it would above all "set an example which, if followed by approximately 100 cities in the United States in the near future, will supply the aerial transportation this country needs; will keep American aeronautics to the forefront; will give employment to a large number of army and navy aviators, aeronautic engineers and mechanics who have been demobilized; will permit the utilization and salvage of war aeronautical material worth millions; will insure the United States from again being caught unprepared in the event of war."

A joint committee of members of the Aerial League, the Aero Club of America, and the Atlantic City Aero Club has been formed to have charge of the establishment of the "air port." It is composed of Rear Admiral Robert E. Feary, Alan R. Hawley, Captain Robert A. Barlett, Captain Grantville A. Pollock, Augustus Post, Major Read G. Landis, Albert T. Bell, Thomas Powers, John Hays Hammond, Jr., Charles Jerome Edwards, Colonel Lester Jones, Director of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey; Major Charles D. White, T. U. Lester, Lieut. Col. H. Jones, Earl Livingston, Jefferson De Mont Thompson, Captain S. Herbert Vesper, Major Thomas S. Baldwin, and Henry Woodhouse.

"The air port will be operated exactly as seaports are operated," added

NEW OFFER IS MADE TO AVERT HARBOR STRIKE

Men to Work on Thirty-Day Agreement While Board Works Out Plan

New York, April 18.—A new offer designed to avert the threatened general strike of 16,000 New York harbor workers, was made by officials of the Marine Workers' Affiliation at a conference with private boat owners and government officials arranged by James L. Hughes, Federal mediator.

The offer on which private owners will act to-day, called for an immediate return to work of all union men now on strike under a thirty-day temporary agreement, with arbitration of the wages and hour issues before a board of nine, four members to be appointed by the union, four by the owners and one by the eight so appointed.

Under the union's offer the men would work during the arbitration under the wage scale and general working conditions that existed prior to the strike in March, but the length of working day would be fixed by Mayor Hylan, who presided at yesterday's conference. The mayor also would designate the ninth arbitrator in the event the other members of the board failed to agree on a ninth man.

'VICTORY MEDALS' FOR THE ALLIES

American Soldiers in Active Service For 15 Days to Get Them

Washington—After prolonged conferences with all the allied Governments, General March, to-day, announced a design had been approved for issuance to every soldier who participated in the great war on the allied side of a "Victory Medal," in commemoration of his service to civilization. The design will be similar for all countries on the face, but may differ in detail for the various armies.

The obverse side of the medal will bear a winged victory and on the reverse will be, in the language of the country by which it is issued, the words "The Great War for Civilization" and the arms of the Allies. A campaign ribbon also has been adopted to consist of a "double rainbow" series, with the red in the center. This ribbon will be similar for all armies and is to be issued in the United States soon.

Button for Civilian Wear
A lapel button for civilian wear also has been adopted. It will be of bronze except in the cases of soldiers wounded in action, when it will be of silver. This medal will represent a star in a wreath with the letters "U. S." for the American soldier, in the center.

The design for the victory medal already has been turned over to the National Art Commission, of which Charles Dana Gibson is chairman. To indicate participation in the more important engagements extra clasps will be given to be attached to the ribbon of the medal. For the American army these clasps will bear the names of battles selected by General Pershing as the most important engagements of the war. Special clasps also will designate the place of service, as in France, England, Siberia or Italy.

For the service ribbons similar insignia have been approved in the form of stars to represent these engagements. The insignia of individual soldiers will be shown by attaching a small silver star for each citation.

Picks Major Engagements
The engagements selected by General Pershing to be mentioned on the discharges of soldiers who participated in them are as follows:

- "Somme defensive, March 21, April 6; Lys defensive, April 9, April 27; Aisne defensive (Chemin des Dames and Northeast of Rheims), May 27, June 5; Montdidier-Neoy defensive, June 9, June 13; Champagne-Marne defensive, July 15, July 18; Aisne-Marne offensive, July 18, August 6; Somme offensive, August 8, November 11; Oise-Aisne offensive, August 18, November 11; Ypres-Lys offensive, August 19, November 11; St. Mihiel offensive, September 12, September 16; Meuse-Argonne offensive, September 26, November 11; battle of Vittorio-Veneto, Italy, October 24, November 4, 1918."

"We propose," said General March, "to award this medal to all officers, enlisted men, drafted men and army nurses who served on active duty for at least fifteen days at any time between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, in the army of the United States and whose service in the army was honorable.

"As it will take some little time to develop the medal itself the ribbon will be awarded first, as it can be procured. We expect to be able to start furnishing the ribbon in a relatively short time."

Finds There is More Money in Butterflies Than School Teaching

There is money in butterflies, Miss Ximena McGlashan, who combines good looks with butterfly activity, has proven. She attended the normal school and returned to her home at Truckee, Cal., she made up her mind she could not stand the humdrum of school-teaching. Butterflies solved the problem for her. First she caught specimens with a net. These she sold at such prices to collectors and museums that she averaged fifty dollars a week for the first ten weeks. Then she began breeding the beautiful winged creatures and already has accumulated a considerable fortune.
