

PEACE CONGRESS ADOPTS REVISED LEAGUE COVENANT

Report on Responsibilities Providing For Trial of Former German Emperor by Five Judges From Great Powers Not Yet Approved

Paris, April 29.—The covenant of the League of Nations in revised form, moved by President Wilson, was adopted yesterday by the Peace Conference in plenary sessions without a dissenting voice. The President's motion also named Sir James Eric Drummond as secretary general of the league and provided for a committee to inaugurate the league.

Thus one of the notable works of the conference passes its final stage and is incorporated in the peace treaty.

The French and Japanese amendments, after a brief discussion, were not pressed, and the way was thus cleared for unanimous acceptance of the league.

Italy Not Represented
Italy was not represented at the session, but the name of Italy appears as one of the members of the league in the covenant as finally adopted.

Nine labor principles were adopted for insertion in the treaty. The session adjourned without considering the report on responsibilities providing for the trial of the former German Emperor by five judges from the great powers. This report was handed to the Council of Four and embodies in the peace treaty a provision for the former Emperor's prosecution. This, however, has not as yet been adopted by the plenary conference.

The session of the conference opened at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the French foreign office under circumstances of unusual interest because of the fact that it was to be one of the last sessions before the meeting of the German delegates at Versailles; that final action was to be taken on some of the main features of the peace treaty, notably the League of Nations, responsibility for the war and the trial of the former German Emperor and others and because important labor clauses were to be inserted in the treaty.

For the first time at the conference sessions Italy was not represented, and the five seats of Premier Orlando and his colleagues at the right of M. Clemenceau, the presiding officer, remained vacant. The other delegations presented full ranks, and the scene was stirring as the French Premier opened the session.

Wilson Makes Speech
President Wilson was recognized at the outset for a detailed explanation of the new covenant of the league. His speech was without oratorical effect and confirmed the explanation of the textual changes, most of which have already been noted, and named Belgium, Brazil, Greece and Spain on the league council and also on the committee to prepare plans for the first meeting of the league. Baron Makino, head of the Japanese delegation, in a brief speech, called renewed attention to the Japanese amendment on racial equality. He said that the race question was a standing grievance, which might become a dangerous issue at any time. The Japanese government and people, Baron Makino declared, felt poignant regret that the amendment had not been incorporated in the covenant, and announced that an effort would be made to have the principle of racial equality adopted as part of the document.

Paul Hymans, representing Belgium, expressed the regret of the Belgian people at the selection of Geneva as the seat of the League of Nations, when approving the high aims of the league.

The Uruguayan delegate announced the adherence of his country to the league.

France Accepts Text
Leon Bourgeois, for France, renewed two amendments tending to give France additional security. One provided for the creation of a committee to ascertain and exchange military and naval programs, information regarding armaments and similar matters. The other provided for "a permanent organization for the purpose of considering and providing for naval and military measures to enforce obligations arising for the high contracting parties under the covenant, making it immediately operative in all cases of emergency."

M. Bourgeois argued that such security was essential to France because of the extended frontiers of that country, which, as President Wilson had declared in the French Senate, were the frontiers of the world's liberties.

The amendment of M. Bourgeois, however, were not pressed. M. Clemenceau then put the question of the adoption of President Wilson's motion, which prevailed without a formal vote.

The covenant was declared adopted and the session proceeded to the labor report, reciting nine principles for inclusion in the treaty, which were also accepted.

After setting aside the report on war responsibilities, for later consideration, the session adjourned.

AUTOMOBILES COLLIDE

The occupants, William Wert and Ray Lonz, were underneath, but crawled out, escaping with minor cuts and bruises.

QUARANTINE IN 17 COUNTIES

No Shipments of Hogs Allowed Except For Immediate Slaughter

The State quarantine against any movement of swine except for immediate slaughter, is now effective in seventeen counties of the State, the order of Secretary of Agriculture Frederick Rasmussen going into force yesterday. The order was issued because of alarming prevalence of hog cholera and the Secretary has called upon farmers, hog shippers and all persons interested in the business to co-operate with the State, while county farm bureaus and veterinarians have been asked to show the importance of the steps being taken.

The counties are mainly in the southeastern and eastern parts of the State, the only points west of the Susquehanna where the disease has appeared being in the Cumberland valley and York county. No extension of the area is contemplated.

There is some hog cholera in western counties, say the State experts, but not to any serious extent.

Liberty Loan Campaign Opens With Big Rally After the Street Parade

The United States had not yet felt the edge of sacrifice during the brief period she participated in the mighty world war. So declared Captain J. E. McPetrie, chairman in the Keystone Division, in the official opening of the Victory Loan drive at a well-attended meeting in the Chestnut Street Auditorium last evening. Speaking with Captain McPetrie, was Miss May Lephart, a Red Cross nurse, who witnessed all the horrors of war during months of service overseas.

"This nation has yet to learn the meaning of sacrifice," he said. "To the dear girl whose boy lies over there in the consecrated fields of France, to the withered mother, whose light has gone out of her life forever, it doesn't matter whether our casualties were 63,000 or 6,900,000 for they have given the full sacrifice."

"Those women do not care whether it was 63,000 or 6,900,000 for it would have been the same to them in either case. But to you other women, it does matter. Think once, for every woman who has felt the burden of war in this country, there were nineteen in England and twenty-three in France. God what a plight were the true in America."

Miss Lephart, after eighteen months' experience as a Red Cross nurse, was able and did tell much of the suffering of the sick and wounded and of their great efforts to bear it up. Always, no matter what their other pleasant talks might be, they raved of the Huns, she said.

The invocation was given by Chaplain Charles K. Imbrie, who himself recently returned to this country after months of service overseas. Judge Kunkel presided at the meeting and introduced the speakers. Community singing under the direction of Abner W. Hartman and the war film, "The Price of Peace" were other interesting numbers on the program.

Previous to this meeting, a parade was held through some of the principal streets of the city. The procession was headed by Mercer B. Tate, Boy Scouts and the Municipal Band, and the parade was followed by more than a score of returned soldiers and then several hundred loan workers. Harrisburg letter carriers were in line under the direction of Lieutenant James T. Young, who recently returned from France.
