Remaining the fourth year he studied with Pembaur and Lambino principally in studying Chopin's works. Theoretical work was received from Schreck. As a side issue some time was given to pipe organ with Homeyer and chorus directing with Homeyer.

Mr. Aker achieved his first triumph in playing "Concerto in A minor" by Grieg, with the Philharmonic orchestra of Berlin, at Albert Halle in Leipzig. In same year played to the King of Saxony, with Reisenauer. Returning to America, Mr. Aker entered into college and conservatory work. He was director in Idaho Technical Institute, two years from which he received leave of absence to go to Berlin to become a student of Carreno, from whom he received daily lessons. Carreno recommended his playing before the Royal Staff, and he was honored applicant out of twenty Americans. In a second appearance he was soloist with the Winderstein Orchestra at Theater des Westen, in which he played a group of Chopin numbers, receiving most favorable criticism from musical critics.

After returning here he organized and directed the Pocatello Conservatory of Music, for four years, appearing frequently in concert.

In season of 1910-11 he gave a series of concerts in the western and middle-western states, appearing in many of the large cities, at the close of the season, having given a series of two recitals in Philadelphia and New York.

Mr. Aker has been resting from his musical activities the last year, but upon urgent requests has consented to open a studio which offers a thorough and artistic course in musical branches.

Studio 1320 Kutztowny Street.

Harrisburg will be glad to know that J. Harry Aker, instructor and concert pianist, formerly of this city, has opened a studio, offering the most modern method of musical education from the preparatory grade to the higher grades including concert repertoire work.

Mr. Aker's early training was with Knoche and Crozier of this city and later with MacDowell of New York. His success was such that MacDowell communicated his favorable impression to Reisenauer of Leipzig, whose master classes he was permitted to enter without the usual obligatory

MALSH RECEIVES HEARTY WELCOME

Young Violinist Presented by Conservatory of Music Plays With Expression and Skill

It was a delightful and wholly enjoyable program that Harold E. Malsh, violinist, played in recital before a large and appreciative audience in Falmestock Hall last evening. The program was well received and was evidenced by the frequent salvos of applause greeting the efforts of the youthful musician.

Malsh plays with strength and feeling. Those who sat near him remarked that he passed into ecstasies of emotion such as Stokowski's when he pulled the bow across the strings. In fact, it was not a playing for a concert, but rather an act of homage and devotion to the gods of music.

It was a happy coincidence that, just as the program opened with the Handel "Sonata in A Minor," the room brightened when the lighting effects were turned on. Strange and happily, too, it was when the brilliant lighting effects of the balcony flooded the room just as the first movement of the sonata brightened into a delightful scherzo-like melody.

There was exquisite artistry in the playing of the beautiful Vieuxtemps "Reverie," the closing number was a deep, throbbing cello-like tone, continuing through a lovely and captivating air that won rounds of applause. The Rameau "Rigaudon" was played with a deep, throbbing cello-like tone, continuing through a lovely and captivating air that won rounds of applause.

The magnificent "Praeludium of Allegro" was presented as the opening number following a brief intermission. Wienawski's "Romance," "The Boat," "The Arkonoid," "Dvorak-Kreisler's 'Indian Lament,' the Bohm 'Legend' and Hubay's familiar 'Hejre Kati,' which Sara Lerner plays so heartily, followed.

The closing number was a beautiful movement from the Mendelssohn "Concerto in E Minor," giving as an encore the Schubert-Wilhelm "Ave Marie" with much tenderness.

In his recital the young musician displayed the pleasing quality of being able to interpret his compositions almost perfectly. He succeeded in swinging into the mood of a Handel sonata or a Wienawski dance with ease and charm, playing the numbers with ability that astonished his hearers.

He possesses a pleasing platform appearance and remarkable power of expression. Mr. Malsh was presented by Mme. Zoline von Bereghy, his teacher at the Harrisburg Conservatory of Music.
