

SEDITION BILL FOR TERRORISTS

Attorney General William I. Schaffer Says It Don't Curtail Liberty

The anti-sedition bill, which is to be amended so that it will be without two sections which might be misconstrued, is aimed at terrorists. It curbs no liberty, does not destroy free speech or free press, nor abridge the right of just criticism of public officials.

This is the opinion of Attorney General William I. Schaffer, who drew the bill. Mr. Schaffer in a statement last night analyzed the bill, enlarging some of its points of last Tuesday, and pointing out just what the measure aims to do.

The Attorney General says: "In some quarters there seems somewhat of a misapprehension as to the sedition bill. It does not affect freedom of speech, liberty of the press or any rights of the people. As I endeavored to make manifest in my discussion of it before the committee at the recent hearing, it is a measure directed only at crimes against government. Government is not the men who are for the time being in office, it is the institution which has been so much discussed, which had the word 'discontent' in it, has been stricken out of the bill, and I had agreed that it should be stricken out before the hearing. While I do not think this section was subject to the construction that its critics put upon it, nevertheless, it might have been so construed and such a construction would not be within the intent of the bill as I framed it.

"The bill provides against willful acts and conduct which tend to make an outbreak or demonstration of violence against this State or against the United States. It seems to me that men who are back of, and who cause outbreaks or demonstrations of violence against this State or against the United States, ought to be amenable to the law. It provides that writings, conduct or acts which encourage any person or persons to take measures with a view to overthrowing or destroying, or attempting to overthrow or destroy by force, the United States, of this State or of the United States, or to be guilty of a crime. I cannot conceive why persons who are guilty of conduct of this kind should not be called before a jury of our citizens.

"It further provides that persons who incite or encourage others to commit overt acts, with a view to bringing the government of this State or of the United States into hatred or contempt, shall be amenable to the law. Those preaching or teaching of our Government or of justice, it makes it a crime to incite any person to do personal injury to an official of this State or of the United States, or to damage the public property. The incitement to such crimes ought to be punished the same as the men who are their tools, and who commit them, it seems to me. It is against the destruction of property, or the property of a public officer because he is in an official position. Ought not to be a crime? It stipulates that writings, publications and utterances which advocate the engaging in crime, violence and terrorism as a means of accomplishing political ends, shall make the authors thereof amenable to the law. So they should be amenable to the law. Ought we not to deal with men guilty of conduct of this kind? It provides against the sale of puppets, or of government, or organizing societies for that purpose, or the renting of buildings for that purpose. All these things ought to be within the reach of the criminal law, and public officials ought to have the means and measures to reach those who are guilty of these things.

"This is all that the bill seeks to accomplish, to reach those seeking to overthrow government by terror and violence. Public officials can be criticized just as freely as before, but the man who would overthrow the Government, and who preaches or teaches revolution by crime, force or terror would be the only one within the reach of this enactment. Do the law-abiding liberty-loving people of this State not agree that such men ought to be treated as dangerous enemies of government? With such a law on our statute books, the men who would overthrow government in our State by violence, crime and terrorism will please to live in the West? They will stand what it means, I believe all law-abiding citizens will favor this bill."

AUTO BILL NOW READY TO PASS

Numerous Changes Made to the Dithrich Bill in House

General readjustment of the weight classes for commercial motor vehicles provided for registration by chassis weight, extension of the reciprocity clause to one day a week, and an increase to forty-five cents a horsepower for registration of pleasure vehicles, are among the amendments made to the Dithrich motor vehicle bill in the House.

The amendments were made following a conference between Representative Dithrich, of Allegheny county, Highway Commissioner Sadler and Assistant Highway Commissioner Biles with Governor Sprout. The changes in the truck regulations, it is said, were suggested by the truck associations of the State and agreements were reached during the conference on the other provisions, which have been changed several times.

The bill in its present form, which is presented to the Legislature with the approval of the administration, provides for all truck weights to be determined by chassis alone. The classes established and the registration fee is as follows:

Class	Weight Pounds	Registration Fee
AA	2,000 to 3,000	$20.00
A	3,000 to 4,500	$30.00
B	4,500 to 6,000	$30.00
C	6,000 to 8,000	$50.00
D	8,000 to 10,000	$75.00
E	10,000 to 12,000	$100.00
F	12,000 and over	$150.00

All commercial vehicles weighing less than 2,000 pounds will be registered according to horsepower.

Weight limits for commercial vehicles to include chassis, body and load, are provided as follows: Class AA, 7,000 pounds; Class A, 11,000 pounds; Class B, 16,000 pounds; Class C, 20,000 pounds; Class D, 24,000 pounds; Classes E and F, 26,000 pounds.

The bill now provides for a limitation of 28 feet in length, 90 inches in width and for 26,000 pounds in weight, which includes overall weight, including chassis, body and load. There is a provision that exempts from the length regulations all trucks now registered or contracted for prior to the passage of the bill.

The question of granting reciprocity to commercial vehicles of other States brought up much discussion. It was generally planned to give such vehicles entering Pennsylvania on the registration of other States, one round trip a month, without requiring a Pennsylvania license, but the conference decided to extend this provision to one round trip a week. It is pointed out that Pennsylvania had to increase the depth of its road foundations to meet the increasing heavy truck traffic and that vehicles licensed in other States and using highways of this State constantly should be compelled to bear a share of the cost of upkeep.

The fee for registration of pleasure vehicles was increased from forty to forty-five cents a horsepower. The present provisions of classes be entirely eliminated. The additional five cents added by the conference means almost half a million additional revenue for the State.

The registration after August 1 of each year are to cost but half of the regular fee. At present the bill is divided on July 1, but the bill formerly called for September 1 and the August compromise was made.

In increasing theft of automobiles led to the strengthening of the provisions for reports of public garages and repair shop proprietors so that instead of keeping records on cars left only for repairs, the bill provides that records must be kept of the manufacturers' number of all cars left for any purpose.

The rate of speed for commercial vehicles was increased in all of Classes A and B from 20 miles an hour to 25 miles an hour; Class C, 18 miles; Class D, 15 miles; and Class E, 12 miles; and Class F, 10 miles.

The light regulations have been amended to allow the use of diffusing devices in addition to deflectors. The bill provides that all commercial vehicles and trailers of a chassis weighing more than 2,000 pounds shall have painted in a conspicuous place the weight limit of chassis, body and load.

The provision for special permission to use commercial motor vehicles in excess of the specifications allowed by the bill, for special hauling, have been amended by providing that a fee of five dollars accompany all applications for this special privilege. The bill provides that in cases of violation of the certain provisions, a sum equal to double the amount of the maximum fine that might be imposed shall be given as a bond for appearance, after waiving summary hearings.

Charge Ministers Preach in Interest of Capitalists

Saskatoon, Sask., May 2.—Union labor has taken a startling step from the industrial into the religious field. Charging that Saskatoon ministers preached in the interests of capitalists, the Trades and Labor Council here went on record at a recent meeting as in favor of establishing a union labor church—a church for laboring people with a minister who will preach straight Bible truths to plain people. Tentative plans for founding such a church were discussed. This action of the labor people is an echo of the plan for a co-operative church adopted by the co-operative farmers' associations. The farmers have put about everything connected with a farm on a co-operative basis—marketing of products, buying and distribution of supplies, creameries, poultry abattoirs, lumbering, coal mining, land appraisals, the settling of immigrants on farms, and even coffin making, as a protest against extortionate charges by undertakers during the epidemic of influenza. Their idea of a co-operative church is that all creeds and denominations of the Protestant faith unite in one great nonsectarian brotherhood.

The co-operative farmer element and union labor for the last six months have been discussing plans by which they may possibly be united on a political platform. If this political ambition is achieved, there seems no doubt in anyone's mind that the destinies of Canada will be directed by the farmer and the workman. The plans of the farmers for a co-operative church and of the workmen for a union labor church is regarded by leaders of both movements as a step nearer the possible merger of the two powerful organizations.
