Thow did you get the role of pick-pocket in this show at the Orpheum, "Turn to the Right?" was asked Mike "Donlin, for as one of the most famous ball players of this generation the sporting editor reckoned Mike rather as a big leaguer than a John Drew, "Till put the cards on the table," says Mike, who looks as though he bathed daily in some fountain of youth, "I needed a job, and I happened to walk into the manager of this show, "You look like a pickpocket, says he, an' that's why I'm in Harrisburg to-day with this company. I must say I like the part. After battling umpires all my life, I seem to fall into pickpocket. I'fe with ease and precision. Come and see me, whether I look natural in the part."

The sporting editor, accompanied by Danny Coogan who is in our midst as personal athletic trainer to Governor Sproul, came to the conclusion after carling Mike on the stage that he is one versatile lad. Mike always had a definess with his mits. He was the only man on the Giants in those days of glory who did not fear Catcher Frank Bowerman, who could lick any athlete Howerman, who could lick any athlete Howerman, who could lick any athlete the oralled under the big tent. "I'd then coralled under the big tent." That last sentence seemed to impress the mighty Bowerman and he never bothered Mike.

This same confidence now radiates the one-time hard-hitting Donlin since he went on the stage, and his character work is one-half the show, with all apologies to Miss Chester, the very able leading lady.

Mike, however, is not enough of a Thespian to set the profession above ball playing and be snoke a message the fall that a message and his character work is one-half the show, with all apologies to Miss Chester, the very able leading lady.

BUY VICTORY

Some have lost their arms, some their legs, some are blind and many have made the supreme sacrifice and given their lives for you and for me.

But how can we do our bit?

We can do our bit in many ways but the one big opportunity is now before us. We can buy Victory Bonds and in this way lend our money to the government in order that our boys may be brought back from overseas, discharged from the service and brought home to us. There are many other purposes the government wishes to use the money for. Almost every one of us can buy a bond and those who can't should encourage others to buy. The persons who say, "we can't buy bonds," and who encourage others not to buy are not good citizens. can do our bit in many citizens.

The boys did not say "We can't The boys did not say "We can't go over there," or the war would still be going on. If you had a son overseas you would want him to come home as soon as possible and not to stay perhaps several months longer, because the folks at home were not willing to help bring him home.

So, in the present Victory Loan drive let us do our share to put our city over the top and in this way put our country over the top with the same spirit our boys went after the Hun.

ful crow shoots are possible in every locality.

The writer joins the ranks of the crow killers, having a personal grievance against "Jimmie" of long standing. Four beautiful canvasback ducks which I had killed, were hung from the limb of a tree, where no wandering "varmint" would molest. The ducks were discovered by a crow and his mate who immediately proceeded to feast upon my suspended birds, at all times sending out their S. O. S. calls to friends and relatives as there was more meat in sight, than they could dispose of personally. My approach had not been obsenting the processing of the processing the state of the sport of trap shooting, which is usually governed by State Organizations. join his State Association affiliating him-self for game and fish protection and propagation, if he is not interested in the sport of trap shooting, which is us-ually governed by State Organizations. sonally. My approach had not been observed—on account of the fog of feathers they were scattering in midair—until I was within a few yards of those miscreants. Gyrations were then combined with discordant yells, in a vain attempt to escape—too late—two loads of chilled sixes accurately directed brought that pair of black devils to an immediate accounting. It has been my pleasure to call many crows and start them directly toward crow heaven, thus visiting the sins of those parents—who mussed up my canvasback—directly upon their children or descendents. Just retribution. It is true, hawks, crows and owls prey upon the young and are mortal enemies of each other and never hunt together, but all specialize upon the nests and ledgelings of the aggressive little ground birds, who are frequently seen giving battle in midair, chasing "Jim" and accelerating his movements by frequent "jabs in the back." A young crow before leaving the nest, will consume food three or four times in excess of its own weight, the major portion of the food being the young and eggs of other birds. The secret of successful crow shooting is equipment and knowledge of crow habits. A ditto crow call is indispensable, the call is easily attuned and a novice will become an expert with a few trials. Crows are easily outwitted and easily coaxed into the killing zone, where there is no trouble to swat this archangel of bird life destruction. Success is based upon scientific deception in measuring wits with the most wily and intelligent bird that files. Your dress should camouflage with surroundings, your blind or hide located on the fly-
