

PARIS KNEW WHAT EDEN GREW

The International Sunday School Lesson for May 11 is "Sin and Its Consequences"—Gen. 3:11

By WILLIAM T. ELLIS

Adam, in the other world, may have grinned at Paris peace proceedings which amazed the world. He knew the reason. Civilization stood against the failure of war-taught nations to learn and practice the lessons of simple sincerity and true brotherhood.

Even so elaborate and modern a creation as the Paris Conference resolves itself into the old elements of human nature, which first made trouble in the Garden of Eden.

FASCINATING TEETH

How Every Woman Can Quickly Charm Her Friends With Lovely Teeth, Clean, White and Brilliant

If you want the cleanest of white teeth and healthy gums free from disease, an easy and quick way to get both is to use a tooth paste so effective and perfect that astonishing results usually come in a week's time.

And the cost is so little. Just go to any drug department store, and get a large tube of SENRECO TOOTH PASTE for 35 cents.

Not only will it make your teeth clean and white, but it will at once remove any filmy coating, help to check the ravages of pyorrhea and banish acidity in the mouth.

It is used by thousands of dentists and its sale has been remarkable. When you visit your dentist, which you should do at least twice a year, ask him about SENRECO. It's a most delightful and refreshing tooth paste.

of Eden—SIN. There has not been that change of heart which makes whole peoples desire first the welfare of all men. The law of God is still displaced by the attempt to supersede it and gratify selfish desires. The devil continues to do business with the vanity and pride and desire of men and women.

Critics of the League of Nations are right in saying that there will have to be a changed heart in humanity if the League is to be successful. Though in the meantime we should set up as much of the machinery of a truly Christian civilization as is possible and workable. Let us have the League of Nations, and then consider whether it is not the mission of this favored western continent to fill it and thrill it with the fires of benevolence and altruism.

The World's Blackest Fact It was none other than the Grand Vizier of Turkey and his harem women, a few days ago, that the blackest deed in all history was the Armenian atrocities. He was wrong; for one bit of fruit from the tree of life is less important than the tree itself. Central to all the woes of the world, and the producer of the conditions of the world, is the ugly fact of sin. Any philosophy which does not recognize the reality of sin, does not adequately explain the conditions of the world in which we live. It is the presence of sin that mars all our Edens.

New-fashioned preachers do not talk much about sin, wherein they differ from every one of the prophets, preachers and teachers in the Bible. There is a power within us and about us which makes us choose the worse rather than the better, the hurtful rather than the helpful. That power is sin; and they best know it who have been most affected by it. Theological seminaries may have doubts about sin, but penitentiaries and hospitals and asylums do not. The consequences of sin clank like ball and chain at the feet of the onmarching world.

We are less concerned with the origin and nature of sin than with the fact of its existence, and with the havoc it is working in the life of our own day. We read with interest the story of the first temptation and fall; and if we are introspective we may trace a similar course in our own experience—desire for what we should not have, doubt that God really means what he says, and determination to have our own way, regardless of consequences.

The Laws of the Jungle Casting aside all the phrases that the preachers use, we ask ourselves: what is the nature of sin? Wherein exactly lies its distinctive quality? At root, and running out through every twig and branch of its life; sin is refusing to believe that what God says is really true. This takes for granted that we may know what God wants of us, and is another subject not to be taken up here. Underlying all sin is unbelief. That is how Grandmother Eve fell; that is the latest of her descendants stumbled.

An alluring trap of the tempter's—and it is having an amazing vogue to-day—was that "Eve would become as wise as God himself; that she would be emancipated for all restrictions, and free to follow her desires. It was religion of the exaltedness of human nature that the devil preached in the Garden. His arguments made God little and man great. "God is only fooling you; the fact is, he is a bit jealous lest you should eat of this tree and become as wise as he is. For all experience is sacred and permitted; the fact that you desire this fruit is sufficient reason why you should have it. See how beautiful it is to look upon, and how pleasant to taste. Come, cast aside your foggy, narrow notions and be free and divine—like unto God himself." So ran the familiar seduction.

Cutting directly across this sophistry is the stern truth that nothing in the universe, not even the sacred like God himself, is so important as obeying the clear will of God. "Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice," cried God's prophet to Saul. The greatest voice in modern literature, that of the peerless parables called "Jungle Tales."

"These are the laws of the jungle; many and mighty are they; But the head and the hoof, the hunch and the hump is—Obey."

To find out what God wants to do, and to do that thing despite hell, and its devils, in the supreme duty and happiness of man. A revival of obedience to God would do more for the world than all the Peace conferences that can be convoked.

The Price We Pay Bitter as never morning after has been in all the ages since was the awakening of Eve. She learned, too late, that she had lost that which she could never have back again; and that she had gained nothing worth the price. She had paid dearly for that which was not worth buying at all. Out of her Eden—what a parable of many a person's experience to-day—out of innocence, out of favor with her husband, and out of joyful relationship with God, Eve learned, what few of us are willing to believe at second hand, that the devil is a liar and the father of lies.

When a child does not welcome its returning father home, because of its own misdeeds, it is repeating the experience of the race. Loss of innocence is the well-spring of unhappiness. Like the jaded appetite which requires ever stronger and stronger stimulants to the spirit from which innocence has fled goes from worse to worse. Has any novelist ever portrayed the real horror of the lack of spiritual susceptibility? "To the impure, all things are impure" is a horrible characterization of a not uncommon mental state. The plight of the pit is that of the man who has no innocent thoughts, no simple and pure pleasures, no delight in what is good, in every glance, betrayal in harmless incidents, and remorse by night and by day. Already, when our first parents knew them-solve out of fellowship with God, they had begun to taste death. No excuses could palliate or atone for their offense. Theirs, and ours, is the suffering.

"Shell Shock" Might Be Termed "Shell Shy"

London, May 9.—According to speakers at a recent meeting of the British Medical Association, "shell shock" is an "unfortunate and unscientific term" for which "shell shy" might better be used.

Sir J. Purves Stewart, senior physician of Westminster hospital, said it really was "molecular abnormality of the nervous system characterized by abnormal reactions to ordinary stimuli."

Dr. F. W. Mott said the war had produced no new nervous disease, and that the varied hysterical manifestations improperly called "shell shock" were emotional disorders and were curable by counter suggestion.

FRENCH MILLS TURNING OUT PEACE PRODUCTS

Manufacture Great Variety of Articles Far From Needs of War

Paris, May 9.—The war manufacturing of France, many of which have already been diverted again to peaceful pursuits, are turning out a great variety of articles that are far from the implements of destruction which were being fabricated on armistice day. So far as possible the war machinery has been kept and is being employed to make the things of peace to which it is best adapted.

Grenade foundries are now making iron water piping, parts for agricultural machinery and non-rusting casseroles. One important establishment which was working on shells is now manufacturing lock-smith's tools. In other shell works iron window shutters, pick-axes, portable anvils, safes and washing machines are being constructed.

Some of the aviation works have been diverted to strange productions. One is turning out threshing machines. Others which made airplane wings are making furniture. A plant which repaired air machines is building farm tractors. Another shop which made special parts for airplanes is installing looms for the manufacture of braid such as is used in upholstering furniture. Carburizers and plumber's lamps are being made by an aviation works which formerly made taps used in the mechanism of the flying machine. The reservoirs for petrol and oil made by one plant have given way to kitchen utensils. A plant which manufactured special articles for aviation and telegraphy has found that it can continue the same line profitably.

A plant which during the war made powder machines is now making implements for the production of benzene and dye-stuffs. Another is turning out crockery. Some plants which were using part of their equipment for the nitration of cotton have turned to the production of paper without finding it necessary to cut down their number of employees.

Works which were devoted to the manufacture of such things as fuses have made some changes in their equipment and are about to embark in the business of making thimbles, hooks, paper-clips and kitchen utensils such as casseroles, sieves, plates and spoons. One plant which made torpedoes and delicate instruments for the accentuation of sound waves, is employed in making sheet iron.

Even Wireless Cookers Automobile lamps, farm implements and wireless cookers are being made by a large firm which constructed winged-bombs for air work. Another, which made incendiary bombs, is producing copper ware and fireworks.

A marine boiler plant is now working on utensils for distillation and rectification. Portable houses are being constructed for the liberated regions by a manufactory which made soldiers' barracks during the war. A plant which made boxes for munitions is constructing artistic chairs. Some of the works which made water bottles, cups and spoons for the army are constructing tin boxes for the preservation of food-stuffs.

One plant which made overshoes and wooden shoes for the army is constructing wooden backs for brushes. Barrels for the fishing industry are being made by an establishment which formerly turned out
