

BIG DRIVE FOR SALVATION ARMY

industry swinging full tilt this morning and hundreds of calls came in for the standard receipt. The house-to-house campaign will not start until Wednesday, but the industrial campaign was launched to-day and early reports showed fine response. Mayor Keister started things off with an impromptu message, saying "I earnestly hope that the citizens of Harrisburg will give all they can spare to this most worthy cause. I have watched the Salvation Army work in this city; it takes many a responsibility of the police department; it is always doing good, and surely Harrisburg needs a permanent building where trained Army men and women can properly take care of the many activities which are so helpful. The Salvation Army has always been a friend to the friendless. It has the respect of all decent people without any reference to creed or belief. It is a great asset for cleanliness and progress in Harrisburg. This organization must have the assistance of the whole city if it is to continue and expand its work of relief here. In this week, beginning to-day, the Army, through an efficient executive committee, will seek funds which it is prepared to turn back, dollar for dollar, to the service of the needy in Harrisburg and the nearby towns. Its books are open and it wants nothing for itself. I certainly expect to see our city go over the top."

The actual canvassing was due to start Wednesday, but at 10:30 to-day, Capt. H. M. Stone, acting chairman in the absence of Capt. E. J. Stackpole, Jr., had a battalion of enthusiastic warriors at headquarters in the Gilbert Building giving final instructions and names of persons who were listed in other campaigns. Much credit is being given to the early efforts of the Elks, who gave $300 as a nucleus of the local fund. John K. Tener was out with a statement to-day telling how from the 50,000 Elks at the front the real story of Salvation work became familiar. "We know from them," he says "that the Salvation Army came nearest to a perfect score of all the civilian agencies undertaking war relief work. Our men are earnest in commendation of the Salvation Army and we are all lined up to fortify them for their financial needs. We are ready to contribute, to help and to co-operate to the limit of our powers."

Our Examinations Are Thorough There is really only one way to fit eyeglasses so they will be beneficial and satisfactory. It is to make a thorough, scientific examination and grind lenses to meet the exact requirements of the eyes. Our examinations are thorough and we grind our own lenses in our own factory which we submit to you unexcelled optical service.

REPUBLICANS IN CONTROL IN CONGRESS

sense to-day disrupted the time-honored custom of appointing congressional committees to call at the White House for notification of the executive. The session beginning to-day was expected to run virtually to the time for the regular December session, which will precede the 1920 national conventions and presidential campaign. Important House committees were to be chosen to-day, but the Senate Republicans were not ready with their committee assignments, because of the progressive fight against the election of Senators Penrose of Pennsylvania and Warren of Wyoming as chairmen of the finance and appropriations committees respectively. Senate leaders arranged to give time for the Republicans' work on committees. Little business is planned in the Senate until these are arranged, although several speeches on the League of Nations and kindred subjects probably will be made.

Will Investigate Waste In addition to the enormous amount of routine business in the composition, analysis and passage of the usual big appropriation bills, the sixtieth Congress will be charged with the responsibility of investigating waste and inefficiency, the delays and blunders which characterized the administration of too many executive departments of the Government. On top of these tasks many enormously important questions of policy of national concern must be given to-day, reconstruction legislation enacted and a hundred other tasks completed.

Repeal of Taxes Proposed Another highly important task which the Republican majority has included in its program is the repeal of many if not all of the unpopular and onerous smaller taxes such as consumption taxes on necessities, soft drinks and the like, the increasing lowering of tax rates, the increase of revenue through the customs houses and the protection through high import taxes of the infant industries which have sprung up in this country since its foreign sources of supply were cut off by the war.

All through the whole course of the Congress the Republican majority will be guided by the principle that it is highly necessary and of the greatest importance to inaugurate and maintain a policy of strict economy in the business of running the Government. This has been made a part of the announced program and it is promised that "pork" legislation is to become a thing of the past.

The course of legislation and its ultimate fate will be guesswork on nearly every bit of legislation, and the urgently necessary speed in going through the mountain of work confronting Congress may be lost entirely if the President and Congress get down to the point of a knockdown and drag out fight.

Inquiry Into Conduct of War Once Congress gets into its proper stride investigations into the whole conduct of the war administration will go on side by side with the grinding work of the constructive legislation necessary for the after the war period. These investigations are not to be undertaken with the sole idea of trying to embarrass the Administration, but to bring to light the true situation which has existed and to apply the proper remedy where it is not too late.

Congress is faced with the responsibility for working out the future policy of the Government in regard to the railroads. The situation is looked on as the most entangled and difficult to unravel and is complicated by the fact that the Railroad Administration is even now in dire need of additional funds and probably will demand from Congress an immediate appropriation of a billion dollars.

Straightening out the telephone and telegraph tangle and the return of the systems to private ownership must be accomplished and it is a foregoing conclusion that the formation of this legislation will be accompanied by a thorough investigation of the manner in which Postmaster-General Burleson, to whose hands the administration of the systems was entrusted after they were taken over, has discharged that trust.

Leaders already have promised that the torrent of complaint and the failure of the country controlled wires to live up to the promises made when the legislation empowered the

NEW REPUBLICAN HOUSE LEADER

Representative Frank W. Mondell, of Wyoming, Republican leader in the House of Representatives, photographed upon his arrival in Washington to attend the opening of the extra session of Congress.

Government to take control shall receive the attention it demands. Ship Policy to Be Determined On top of the railroads and wire situations the shipping situation will be investigated thoroughly with the idea of determining what the future policy of the United States toward its new great industry shall be. Chairman Hurley of the Shipping Board and the committees of Congress which will frame the legislation are ready to work together harmoniously on this problem with an idea of turning the great fleet of Government-owned ships, built under the spur of the stern necessities of war, over to the most advantageous peace time usage.

The House proceeded to business by electing Representative Gillett, of Massachusetts, Speaker, and the Senate by electing Senator Cummins, of Iowa, president pro tem. Victor Berger, of Wisconsin was challenged and not permitted to take the oath because of his conviction under the espionage law.

Bodies of Two More Lewistown Victims Found in the Swift Junia

Lewistown, Pa., May 19. — The bodies of three victims of the recent drowning accident on the Juniata river near here, have been recovered up to noon to-day. The bodies are those of Sherman Barman and J. Cloyd Corbin, Alexandria, and another man who has not been identified.

The body of Corbin was found yesterday afternoon by a man named Marsh, one of a crew of several men in a flatboat. It was found approximately 500 feet from the scene of the action, near the opposite shore. Identification was made by Elmer Corbin, father of the drowned man, and the body was shipped to his home last night. The other two bodies were recovered this morning. They were floating on the river. Barman's body was located near Denholme, and the unidentified body was on the river just west of Mifflin.

Private Ellis C. Fickle Relates What the United States Army Has Done For Him

PRIVATE ELLIS C. FICKLE, Company B, One Hundred and Twelfth Infantry, Twenty-eighth (Iron) Division, of 1202 Market street, this city, who re-enlisted on Saturday at the local United States Army Recruiting Station, 325 Market street, and was forwarded to Fort Slocum, N. Y., for embarkation with the Army of Occupation, relating an interesting account of what the Army had done for him to Colonel J. B. Kemper, who is in charge of the Harrisburg district, embracing twenty counties, for recruiting. Fickle was in the fights at the Marne, Fismes and in the Argonne. He would not relate anything regarding his own participation in the bloody fray, modestly refraining from telling of any of his own exploits at the front, but gladly told of what the Army had done for him. He made the following statement to Colonel Kemper: "I know that in many ways I have been benefited by my enlistment in the Army, because I realize the good effects of the physical, mental and moral training I have received during my period of service. First, the physical benefits I have received. With regard to health I have learned much. Thanks to home training I came into the Army clean, and my knowledge that has come to me in the service has been and will continue to be a source of great help to me in putting out of my mind any thought of leading anything but a clean life. I have learned here, as I believe I could not have so thoroughly learned anywhere else—the value of physical fitness and the abundance of health which comes from leading an outdoor life, together with the regular hours of eating and sleeping and exercise of Army life. From the very first day of Army life the soldier gets rigorous, intensive training which gives to him the hardness that he gets nowhere else."

interest to my country and instilled into me a greater love for Old Glory and what she stands for. I have had the pleasure and education that comes from traveling over a large part of the country and from hearing and seeing men of renown. All in all the lessons learned of greater service and sacrifice and the physical fitness and knowledge gained in the military service will be inestimable value to me throughout my whole life and not to be compared to the compensation I have received in money. That's why I am re-enlisting, Colonel."
