

DR. ROLLER PUTS CLEAN SPORT BACK ON MAP HERE; STUNTS FOR HILL LEAGUE TONIGHT

Clean Sport Back on Map By Dr. Roller

Dr. B. F. Roller, an eminent physician of New York, stepped lively into Harrisburg last evening and a little less than one hour put a clean sport back on the map here, clear, thrilling and permanently. The magnificent exhibition of strength and skill given by Dr. Roller and Tommy Draak, Belgian-Netherlands champion, made the big hall, which was well filled, forget all about unpleasant boxing fiascos and turned attention to the Salvation Army benefit on Saturday night next, where Draak will appear again, hooked up with Jack Ozar, furnishing a spectacular match, if there ever was one.

The match last evening was at catch-as-catch-can style and went the full three falls. The two grapplers fought gamely through thirty-nine minutes on headlock and too hold until Roller gained the first fall of the evening with a body and arm lock. Draak, just previous to his downfall, had the powerful doctor in an extremely precarious position when Roller suddenly twisted loose, leaped hard on Draak's chest, winded him and pinned his shoulders against the canvas. A great roar which rocked the hall went up as the popular New York surgeon gained the initial fall for Roller is immensely popular here.

Dr. Roller has permanently brought himself into favor with the substantial sporting element of Harrisburg. As he entered the hall last evening Ross A. Hickok, famous athlete of earlier days, gripped the great wrestler and complimented him on his wonderful condition at the age of 42. "I am two years your senior," remarked Hickok; "I remember you a wonderful specimen of manhood. Personally I have not kept up active exercise, but—well look me over."

Dr. Roller pinched Mr. Hickok's muscles and ventured to suggest: "You ought to be wrestling, sir, and show the athletes of to-day what they should be doing." Another prominent Harrisburger who greeted the wrestler-physician was Dr. Harry Douglas, well-known physician here who was trained by Roller at the University of Pennsylvania.

Tom Draak, the rugged man who wrestled with Roller last night, and announced that Roller had gained in exactly one minute.

Dr. Roller, at the end of the final fall with a full body lock it may be mentioned here, that quite a number of the fair sex saw this typical rugged American exhibition of strength and skill, was given an ovation only second to the other. He aims to be here on Saturday night and wrestle for the Salvation Army show.

Draak, surprised and dazed to find himself beaten just when victory seemed within his grasp, also wanted to have something to say. Rising, he told the crowd: "I acknowledge my defeat, and by a good man. I have no excuse to offer except that I am surprised, for I believed I would win to-night. All I ask is that I may have another chance at Dr. Roller."

The match was made immediately for June 3, here in Harrisburg. Dr. Roller gave the most extraordinary illustration of what it means to keep fit. He tackled the younger man for a second bout after only ten minutes' rest. In exactly eleven minutes Draak downed Roller with a full body scissors and arm lock. It then appeared as though the youth and strength of Draak were more than equal to the age, experience and cleverness of Roller for the doctor appeared to be wearing away under the strain. Many predicted that it would not take Draak ten minutes more to gain the third and deciding fall, but such was not to be the case. The two wrestlers tore at each other for the third fall like enormous agile tigers. Draak gained a terrible grip on the doctor's head, but the supple physician turned on his back with Draak's head directly beneath him and dropped. The Belgian wrestler's shoulders smacked the floor and his head was nearly crushed by the fall. He lay stunned and Referee Baumann wrestling gave Max Baumann, the finest credentials possible. "When this young man advertises a wrestling match in Harrisburg," he assured, "you can be sure it will be on the level. I have known him since he was knee-high, and he has never disappointed."

In the preliminary match last night "Ed" Fair gained one fall over Julius Kamsky before time was called. Both sides are Tech athletes and show promise of becoming good local grapplers. Fair won with an arm lock and body scissors.

DRIVE TO WAKE UP ALL TRAPSHOOTING UNITS

The Harrisburg Sportsmen's Association is right in line, holding its weekly contests, with a nation-wide campaign, under the management of that indefatigable promoter, Peter F. Carney, of the National Sports Syndicate, who announced his plan as follows:

A systematic reorganization of the sport of trapshooting will be accomplished by a careful survey of the units that go to make up the national organization—first, the State associations; second, the leagues and clubs, and, third, the individual shooters.

There are 46 associations in the United States and one in the Eastern section of Canada. Some of these are active, some are inactive, quite a number are active one year and several are dead. A great majority if not all of the inactive associations can be made active by a little intensive effort, and the chances are that the dead association can be revived also.

The American Trapshooting Association has enlisted the assistance of the professional shooters in waking up the State organizations. Under the new plans a State association will be formed in each county, which will conduct the State championship trapshooting tournament and O K the tournament applications from the gun clubs. These things are essential, but a State association can do, and should do much more.

Send Delegate to National Body. This year each State association has the privilege of sending a delegate to the annual meeting of the American Trap Shooting Association which will be held in New York in November. These delegates will have a voice and vote in the affairs of the sport directly concerning them. Therefore, they should represent the trapshooters of their respective states, and in order that these delegates represent all the shooters, it is necessary for every club to become affiliated with its State association. In union there is strength.

It is perfectly obvious that there is no incentive for a club joining an association that is not active—or, plainly speaking, only half alive. Consequently, the first step in the reorganization of the sport will be to establish on an active basis each one of the State associations. When the State associations are active then the campaign for activity will be started on the clubs.

This looks as if the association were stars at the top and working down, but that is the plan. It seems more logical that if the clubs were made active that it would be easier to get an active State organization. Right along these lines we might add that in the first three months of this year 88 new gun clubs saw the light of day and 54 gun clubs that were inactive during the war again showed signs of life.

Nearly 2000 trapshooting clubs went out of business with the Armistice, but all of these clubs will come back—many of them stronger than ever before because of the additional interest in shooting.

MANY OF 28TH DIVISION SLIP HOME QUIETLY

Two Hundred Men of City and Vicinity Arrive Without Welcome

Discharged yesterday, 200 Keystone Division men of Harrisburg and vicinity, largely from the 103d Supply Train, Ammunition Train and the 103d Sanitary Train, quietly returned home last evening on the 5.58 westbound train on the Philadelphia division of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

There was little unusual about the arrival of the men. The train steamed into the station with no special ringing of the bells nor blowing of the whistle, and the crowd that thronged the station was much the same as the ordinary one. Only a comparatively small number of relatives were on hand to greet the men.

Plans of the War Department to muster out the Keystone Division men according to geographical localities and zone away, the time of the departure of the men made uncertain, and so without definite information as to the time of the arrival of the men, officials here could make no arrangements for their reception.

Practically all of yesterday was taken up with paying of the men and they continued to arrive in the city on most of the westbound trains arriving during the night. The men all declared themselves to be glad that they could be home, and declared they felt not the least bit slighted because no reception had been held for them.

Carlisle had a large number of her sons included in the returning men, and she sent a large representation here to greet them and to take them home.

Dauphin-Perry League Stirred by Stories of Decision on Four Clubs

Officials of teams in the Dauphin-Perry League are somewhat disturbed to-day over the circulation of stories to the effect that officials of the Newport team were entirely responsible for the movement which resulted in the decision of league representatives to continue with but four teams, leaving Mifflintown without representation, following the withdrawal of Reedsville several weeks ago.

Statements have been issued calling attention to the fact that the resolution providing for the continuance of the league with but Marysville, Millersburg, Duncannon and Newport represented, was adopted by an unanimous vote. It is further pointed out that representatives of towns other than Newport, first introduced the subject of a four-club league and took an active part in the discussion.

One club, other than Newport, is known to have voted in favor of a four-club league, even before Reedsville withdrew. Its delegates were instructed to favor such a league if any such question arose at a league meeting. The officials of this club explain that it was practically unorganized at the time decision was made to admit Reedsville and Mifflintown and in other towns similar statements have been made by officials.

As an aftermath to the controversy at the league meeting between Mifflintown and Newport, which was the league representative, and which was advanced as one of the reasons for the decision to refuse Mifflintown a berth, officials of that club have issued announcements that J. Fertz had been appointed to represent the organization at the meeting. He voted in favor of the rule permitting the use of five non-resident players, while J. Kelley McNair, who also claimed to be the legal representative, favored the use of but three non-residents.
