Buying glasses is not-or at ast should not be, a commercial proposition. You do not go where you get the biggest lenses or the largest frames for the money, any more than you would employ a physician who would give you the largest quantity of give you the largest quantity of medicine, or the dentist who would put the largest filling in your tooth for the least money. You should go to your optometrist for his professional ability—high grade service, the proper cor-rection of your eye trouble and the most becoming and service-able frame or mounting. You go to him for satisfaction and com-fort.
