Members of the Junior class of the Lemoyne High School held their annual spring dance last evening at the Villa, with the Banjo-Saxo orchestra on hand and live events with spirited jazz music. Streamers of crepe paper floated from huge wheels suspended from the beamed ceiling and festoons of blue and grey crepe formed a canopy over the heads of the dancers. Pennants, banners and palms were used most effectively throughout the room and the whole effect was greatly enhanced by the subdued lighting required by shades of blue and grey. Over two hundred people attended the affair arranged by a committee comprising Alfred Eberts, chairman; Paul Smith and Ala Pryor.

Your Eyes Work Harder Than Your Hands

People work harder with their eyes than they do to. Most people work longer and harder with their eyes than with their hands, frequently under strong artificial light—resulting in eye strain, headaches, fatigue and nervous disorders. There has been no end to the invention of labor-saving inventions—devices to relieve the burdens of the hands and body, but most of them have imposed additional burdens on the eyes. There is but one offset to this modern condition of affairs and that is Glasses to help and relieve the eyes—otherwise the eyes would soon wear out and break down, but the glasses must be right. Not too strong nor too weak. They must be just right. I invariably make a thorough examination and am careful to fit them to the eyes. There is nothing but the very best eye glasses and conditions and save the eyes from further hardships.
